The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

Guaranteed LOWEST Down Prices in THE COUNTRY

"We go the distance for you."

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Congratulations to Christy Turlington and actor Ed Burns of Wainscott, who announced their engagement at Abaya, the East No-LITa restaurant. Among those attending the dinner were Russell Simmons, Herb Ritts, Naomi Campbell, Bono, Eric Nies and Vin Diesel.

The designers are strutting their stuff. Betsey Johnson of East Hampton and New York m.c.'d her sexy springy little lace dresses at Tavern on the Green. Young and beautiful Elizabeth Jagger did one of the turns on the runway in a dazzling outfit.

Congregation Tifereth Israel of Greenport is celebrating its 100th year with a grand dinner-dance fundraiser at the Soundview Restaurant in Southold on September 30. Honorees are Dr. Saul Rosenstreigh and his wife Susan, Paul and Rosemarie Birnam and Ron and Anne Smith. A special award, Centennial Citizen of the year, will be made to Dan Rattiner of Dan's Papers.

One face that has been around the Hamptons this summer is the face of Kathleen Turner (of Amagansett). She opened her home for a benefit and was seen making the scene at the Hampton Classic. It seems we will be seeing a lot more of her, too, this spring on Broadway. This ageless beauty will be baring it all in the role of Mrs. Robinson in the production of the The Graduate. Kathleen will be repeating her role that she first did in London last season. Joining her on stage will be Alicia Silverstone, who is making her

Everything You Need To Know About The Bonac Pants On Fire Highway

By Dan Rattiner

People have accused me, inaccurately, of being the man who first published all the back roads in the Hamptons, so the summer people could get from point A to point B in style, safety and without hassle, just like us local people do.

This is a bad rap. For forty years I have been writing this newspaper and using the back roads. And for forty years I have sworn I would never, ever tell what they were. I never have.

Once, and I think this is what people are referring to, I wrote elaborate and totally inaccurate instructions about using half a dozen of the back roads, the last line of each instruction being "...and as you head down East End Lane toward the beach, put your foot on the accelerator all the way so when you hit the dune at the back of the beach, you arch high enough over all the sunbathers to clear them easily before splashing into the sea."

How anybody could believe these were accurate instructions is beyond me. And how anybody after, having read them and perhaps taken them, remains still standing is even further beyond me.

I am referring... to the Bonac Pants On Fire Highway... You get on it in Westhampton... off it in Montauk.

But to this day, I have this reputation of having been the man who revealed all, in print, in a pass-along weekly circulation of Dan's Papers in excess of 150,000 and that is why there are such traffic problems, even on our back roads, today.

I am fed up with this bad rap. And so, to get my revenge, here and now, I am going to tell you everything I know about the secret, two lane, straight as an arrow road that will take you from Westhampton to Montauk in less than 20 minutes. No, it is not the Long Island Railroad. And no, it is not the back roads that everybody already knows about.

I am referring, and I know I am going to get hell for this but I have been getting hell anyway, to the Bonac Pants On Fire Highway deep in the woods north of Route 27. You get on it in Westhampton. You get off it in Montauk. And there are exits in Southampton and East Hampton. Now you know.

Here's the history of this road.

The Bonac Pants On Fire Highway was hacked through the woods in 1722 by two men named Abraham. One of them had already hacked a road through Springs which we all know today as Abraham's Path. The other had hacked a road through Amagansett which we all know today as Abraham's Landing Road.

These two men did not know each other, but in 1721, at a fund raiser for the Colonial Rebel Gunpowder and Ammunition Fund (CRGAF) at a private home in Wainscott, they were introduced by mutual friends and, if you don't believe this, we refer you to the pictures taken of people at that party published in Dan's Papers at that time. There they are. The two Abrahams. Anyway, the two Abrahams shook hands and almost immediately decided to build a two lane back road through the Hamptons from Westhampton to Montauk which they intended to call Abrahams' Highway, with the apostrophe after the "s" to indicate this was being done by the both of them.

On the first day that the road was open, however, and you know this is coming, one of the Abrahams' pants caught fire, and this Abraham lit off like a blue streak down the road and set a record, running, from Westhampton to Montauk in twenty two minutes and twelve seconds, although this time may not be completely accurate because digital watches had not yet been invented.

Word of this development spread — not about the watches, but about the victim Abraham having had the contents of a whale oil lantern spilled on his pants and then lit by heaven knows who — and the name of the road was changed to Abraham's Pants Caught Fire Highway. The following year, the name was shortened to Abraham's Pants On Fire Highway and running down the highway with your pants on fire became a thing to do for about forty years. How this eventually became known as Bonac Pants On Fire Highway has been lost in the mists of time, which closed up like a fog curtain one afternoon, but it happened and there is one school of thought that says the name was changed because the Abraham whose pants had not caught fire became jealous that the road now referred only to the other guy and nailed up a new sign removing BOTH of their names. And there is another school of thought that says that the name was changed either to Tonic Pants on Fire Highway (it had something to do with the naming of Gin Lane in Southampton) or Manic Pants On Fire Highway and this, whichever it was, was later mispronounced to Bonac, which everyone knows is the Indian word for potatoes.

Anyway, that is the history of the Bonac Pants on Fire Highway, except to say that today it is only known by all the local people who will never tell you about it, damn them all, and by the Department of Defense, which has named the Bonac Pants On Fire Highway as the official evacuation route in the event of a nuclear explosion or the releasing of radioactive material from a power plant or something.

Where is it? Exactly? Look for the big blue and white signs that read COASTAL EVACUATION ROUTE. You'll find them on the Montauk Highway, westbound. Just follow them, and they will take you right to the main entrance of the Bonac Pants On Fire Highway. Good luck. •

If Two Dogs Bite Each Other, Can One Be More To Blame Than The Other?

By Dan Rattiner

Autumn is the time when our various government officials look back at the summer season, assess how things went, and begin to think of adjustments and modifications they can make for the summer season of 2002.

For the most part, this is a good thing. I have no doubt, for example, that something will be in the works to deal with the outlandish fines private parking lot owners charged to unlock metal boots they attached to the tires of cars parking illegally on their property. Two hundred dollars to turn a key in a lock? There were fistfights. The community has never had to deal with tire boots before. Surely this is a matter for public concern.

On the other hand, there are public officials sniffing about in more mundane sections of the community codebooks looking for trouble. It's an imperfect world. There's always trouble of some sort. And lawyers have to eat.

For example, last week the Suffolk County Legislature announced they have been poking around in the New York State codebook and they are now going to take action to fix a loophole in a law that deals with dogs and cats. At least the dogs and cats in Suffolk County. According to current state law, people who own dogs and cats are to be held responsible if one of them bites somebody. The offending owner can be brought into court by the state, fined $400 for a minor bite and $800 for a major bite (defined as resulting in "serious injury" — the result of a prior year's poking around), and ordered to confine their dog. If a dog or cat repeats the offense, the state is allowed to violate the otherwise sacred rule that a man's home is his castle, go onto his property and bring the dog to the pound for possible permanent confinement or euthanasia.

> "The law doesn't concern itself with dogs and cats biting one another..." It does concern itself with dogs and cats biting sheep, cattle, goats...

This is the law currently in place and on the surface of things, it appears that the State has all the bases covered, doesn't it?

"The law doesn't concern itself with dogs and cats biting one another," County Legislator Anthony Crecca of Hauppauge said.

Indeed it doesn't. On the other hand, in another section, the existing law DOES concern itself with dogs and cats biting sheep, horses, cattle, goats, swine, fowl, ducks, geese, turkeys, rabbits, pheasants and deer. The same guidelines apply. If a dog bites your rabbit once, the owner of the dog could get a $400 fine. If a dog bites your rabbit a second time, causing "serious injury," the authorities can step in and remove the offending dog just as if it had bitten a person.

So now a bill has been put together to add the words dogs and cats to the victim list. And on August 28 the county voted to take it to public hearing. The hearing is this week, but too late for us to cover it and report to you how it turned out. Too bad for you.

I suppose one would say at this point, this is all well and good and no big deal. The County is truly fixing a loophole.

But this bill heading for its public hearing goes much further. In fact it brings in some new paragraphs and clauses that, if passed into law, will create an entirely new and untested area of law. No-fault for dogs.

These new paragraphs and clauses say that if a dog has in a previous case been a victim of an attack and in the current case is exhibiting behavior that is "tormenting, abusing or assaulting" to the dog who had attacked him before, then if this same dog bites him again, "the blame shall be considered not to be all on one side." It also says that when you have one dog attacking another who has attacked before, if the attacking dog, during the second incidence, is attacking to "protect itself, its kennels or its offspring," then the second dog bite cannot be entirely its fault. A judge will have to determine what percentage of fault will have to be allocated to whom.

Who dreams this stuff up?

And there's more. The bill also breaks new ground, vigilante fashion, in allowing private individuals to take the matter into their own hands without calling in the authorities.

"The owner of the animal being attacked, or any other person witnessing the attack, may destroy such dog while so attacking."

People wonder why our taxes are going up. Our taxes are going up because our government officials are paying attorneys $250 an hour to make this stuff as complicated and impossible as possible. Therefore it will only have to be modified again.

I would like to suggest further paragraphs and clauses to this bill. (Did a county lawyer's ears just perk up?) Nowhere is there any mention in this proposal about swans. We have swans in Lake Agawam in Southampton. We have swans in Town Pond in East Hampton. Swans are in no danger of being attacked by dogs and cats. Dogs and cats are in danger of being attacked by swans. People are also in danger of being attacked by swans.

Swans look good. But word of mouth has gotten around. Don't get too close to one of them. You'll get a nasty peck.

And what about guinea hens? There are herds of guinea hens up on Scuttlehole Road in Bridgehampton.

And now that the off-season is here, we're going to have seals. One thousand-pound harp seals will be humping themselves up onto the beaches all over the Hamptons from October to April to sun themselves, rest up, and give anybody who comes over to say hello and offer a pat a nasty bite.

Who do we haul into court to take responsibility for these harp seals? That sound you hear is a hundred attorneys scurrying to the law books. •

A Trillion Indestructible White Plastic Tote Boxes Are The Wave Of The Future

By Dan Rattiner

I was coming out of radio station WBEA in Amagansett the other day when at the exit I passed on the floor something I know well. It was one of those new US MAIL tote boxes, government regulation, that are beginning to show up everywhere. We use them at the office to store back issues of the paper. We use them at home for folded clean laundry. Hardly anywhere are we using them for the purpose they were intended. And nowhere are there any postal police showing up to tell us we shouldn't be doing that.

These tote boxes are made of white bubble plastic that is virtually indestructible. They came into general use about five years ago. Somewhere in Washington, the year before, a 200-page proposal went out to manufacturing companies around the country. We need tote boxes. They must be indestructible, light in weight, stackable, white, easy to lift, contain handgrips on either side and say US MAIL on them in big blue letters. The first order would be for five million.

Somewhere in Fort Lauderdale, there is a man with a mansion and an 80-foot yacht on the inland waterway who won that bid.

For awhile, during the first few weeks they were being handed out at the post office, I thought they were like videotapes. Keep them over night. But then return them. If you don't there will be a fine. And maybe jail.

But the post office people never really got into the swing of the thing about enforcing the return of these boxes. They'd go out into the country side. Someday they'd come back. They did say US MAIL on the sides. But in the meantime, you could, in addition to carrying your mail in them, carry your dry cleaning, your dirty wash, your recycled papers, your new puppy, even, in an emergency, a child in the back seat of your car. Your seatbelt goes through the handgrips.

I think, at first, the post office really thought these indestructible boxes would be used only for the purpose of hauling the mail out to your car, which is surely what they had in mind. But pretty soon it became apparent that the public considered these tote boxes as a sort of gift. You pay your taxes, obey the law, volunteer for a beach cleanup, and, at the end of the year, they gave you this indestructible plastic white tote box. You can keep it if they don't catch you.

Everyone knows that the US Postal Service is not run like a business. Five million get made. Five million go out and do not come back. They order another five million. And at the end of the second year they raise the price of a first class stamp two cents. Big deal.

You see them in the back of SUVs, filled with beer bottles, going somewhere. You see them in bedrooms...

And so, the US MAIL totes have, as the years have gone by, become part of the twentyfirst century American lifestyle. You see them filled with sand outside office buildings for disposal of cigarette butts. You see them filled with flowers planted in the ground. You see them in bedrooms, filled with newborn kittens. You see them in the back of SUVs, filled with beer bottles, going somewhere. You see them strapped to the luggage racks of bicycles. Years ago, people strapped milk cartons to the backs of bicycles. But there'd be hell to pay if the dairy, who's name was written on them, found out about it. What, you think these review: don hewitt and kati marton

In another well received, well attended evening in the rear yard of the Bridgehampton Library the lawn was covered with hundreds of chairs for this immensely popular program, known for noted author and providing the opportunity for in depth discussions with the audience.

Joining guest speaker Don Hewitt at the Fridays at Five Program was Kati Marton, whose fifth book on presidential marriages in the twentieth century will be released in mid-September. Marton's engaging works include An American Woman, The Polk Conspiracy: Murder and Coverup in the Case of CBS News Correspondent George Polk, A Death in Jerusalem - The Assassination by Extremists of the First Middle East Peacemaker and Wallenberg: Missing Hero, a biography of Raoul Wallenberg, who worked against Hitler, saving over 100,000 Jewish Hungarians from the concentration camps. A Swedish national, Wallenberg subsequently vanished.

For ABC, Marton's coverage of international events brought her to Bonn as the Bureau Chief, reporting on terrorism, the Vatican and Breznev. Marton is also a high profile contributor to the Wall Street Journal, Vanity Fair, and The Times of London.

Marton's reporting on National Public Radio from Washington, D.C., gave her an opportunity to host "America and the World" and to contribute to "all Things Considered." As the Director of the Committee to Protect Journalists, Marton diligently advocates for the protection of First Amendment freedoms and the rights of journalists. She wrote a letter to Madeleine Albright in 1997, then the Foreign Minister, regarding the climate for the media in covering Bosnia. Slobodan Milosevic was contacted in 1998 "out of concern for the status of independent media in Yugoslavia." The Kyriazis foundation recognized her efforts with an award; she has also been honored by the Marc H. Tanenbaum Foundation for the Advancement of Interreligious Understanding and she is a recipient of a Gannett Fellowship and the prestigious Peabody Award.

Regarding Bill and Hillary Clinton, Marton remarks that "the Presidency is the story of their marriage. Throughout the Genifer Flowers scandal, if it weren't for Hillary standing by him, Bush would have won." On the Health Care issue, "Hillary alternated between saving and endangering"...in that "we're not ready" for a First Lady to assume this position in policy...there is an inherent "discomfort with the operational role. Nobody elects the First Lady," and there was a groundswell of "public reaction to overreach."

Yet our senator from New York was able to create a base of political support unique in American history, apparently independent from the President's. As with the other Presidential couples, the Clintons have had to build both a personal and political relationship, under the microscopic, painful scrutiny of the media. Marton relates a quote from Lady Bird Johnson, "We are narrowing the number of people willing to run."

After hundreds of interviews and decades of journalististic excellence, Marton is certain that there will be a "First Gentleman" in our lifetime. It remains to be seen how this new dynamic will affect the public.

Enter Don Hewitt, whose 60 Minutes, since 1963, reached a broader spectrum of the population, some of whom would not otherwise be engaged in discussions vital to the nation. Indeed, the variety of provocative stories has earned top ratings year after year in a market unparalleled in competition.

Hewitt has come to Bridgehampton to discuss his book, Tell Me a Story: Fifty Years and 60 Minutes in Television, in which he openly reveals his political and cultural beliefs. He is refreshingly candid about his wavering voting record. He honestly discusses his views on same sex marriages (he's not ready, but he quips that opposite sex marriages aren't doing that well).

The much celebrated producer has received a lifetime of awards, in 1999 securing the Burton Benjamin Memorial Award for a "lifetime of distinguished achievement in the cause of press freedom" from the Committee to Protect Journalists. This TV Academy Hall of Famer has had to find space for eight Emmy's, two Peabody's and a Broadcaster of the Year Award from the International Radio and Television Society.

It all began fifty-three years ago with CBS News. Hewitt directed Douglas Edwards, going on to produce the show; all told, spending fourteen years on the broadcasts. As the Executive Producer of the CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite Hewitt implemented a number of widely utilized

The Party's Over

A Hundred Happy Birthday Helium Balloons Skitter Across The Ocean

By Dan Rattiner

As most readers know, most of these essays are written on the beach. I go down there every day. Every season. And I have done this for years.

I get to see a lot of good things at the beach, from seashells to surfers to surfcasters. But I also see bad things, such as styrofoam coffee cups, bottles and, well, festive helium balloons. Partially deflated festive helium balloons, flapping around on the sand, are not what our beautiful Hampton beaches are about.

Now, you have to give helium balloons a little benefit of the doubt. They have come from a celebration, a fund raiser or a birthday party or some other good time, but still — it is so discouraging to be sitting on what are perhaps the most beautiful beaches in America and seeing a seagull waddle over to one of these things flapping around, its ribbons stuck in the sand, and reading HAPPY NEW JOB. This is not right.

Here's how it works. Everyone is outside in somebody's backyard, standing up, listening to the the moderator extoll the virtues of the next speaker. There is a drum roll, a great cheering and shouting and applause, and as the guest of honor, smiling and waving, climbs the steps to the podium, a thousand balloons are released into the sky.

No, they do not fly up close to the sun, overhead, and pop. They fly up, drift around in the air currents, slowly lose the buoyant quality of the helium, and when a kind of new equilibrium is reached, float back to earth. Two thirds of the earth is ocean. Two thirds of the balloons land in the ocean. Then the wind blows them onto our beaches where everybody can read them and agree that a wonderful time was had by those people celebrating whatever it was, whenever it was.

Make everybody who deals in inflatable balloons have their company names printed on the balloons... Good advertising.

Here is what I think ought to be done about this.

I think that everybody who blows up a balloon should be required by law to put a fifty dollar bill in it. If everybody knew that they could, by bringing this partially inflated balloon to the authorities and having them pop it they would be entitled to the fifty dollars, this problem would end immediately.

(Maybe this only partially solves the problem. Citizens would wrestle a balloon open and take the fifty bucks and just throw the balloon pieces aside. I got it. Put a CERTIFICATE good for fifty bucks inside the balloon, redeemable at the Town Clerk's office ONLY IF ACCOMPANIED BY THE REMAINS OF THE BALLOON.)

Another idea. Make everybody who deals in inflatable balloons have their company names and phone numbers printed on the balloon along with the festive message. Good advertising. And good because we could call them up anytime day or night and have them come down to the beach and clean up what they have littered.

Carry a firearm. Whenever you give a helium-inflated balloon to a child and the child cries out and screams my balloon got away! my balloon got away! you can raise the weapon and shoot it down. Your kids will love this. Then play Find the Balloon.

Ban helium balloons entirely. What did we all do before helium balloons? Why do we need helium balloons? We got along fine, with all the celebrations going ahead right on schedule, with everybody having just as good a time as we did after helium balloons. Back then, I think, they released white peace pigeons.

Ban the use of helium balloons outside. Inside, after they have been inflated and oohed and ahhhed over, have a balloon popping party. What fun. And if you do it quickly, and you have the windows closed, you can offer a prize to the first person who can talk like Donald Duck. Or blow up the building.

We have banned smoking from public places, gotten soda manufacturers to make flip tops that stay attached to the can, gotten beer manufacturers to give up making those plastic six pack holders that the dolphins and swans would get tangled up in. I'm sorry. But now we gotta do something about helium balloons. •

Andy Warhol's portrait of Ethel Scull - 1963

Shot Heard Round The World

Remembering The East Hampton Party That Started The Women's Movement

By Dan Rattiner

Ethel Scull died last week in a one room apartment on the Upper West Side. She's been long forgotten. Few people today know who she was. She was 79.

Ethel Scull and her husband Robert, multi-millionaire art collectors and the toast of New York, held a very famous party at their home here on Georgica Road in East Hampton in 1970. It touched off the Women's Movement. And for feminists, it was like the "shot heard round the world" in 1776. The party made headlines everywhere. After the Scull party, people said, things would never be the same again. And they sure weren't.

Robert Scull and his wife were in their early forties at the time. They had come from a poor background, but Robert had made millions in the taxicab business. They moved from the Bronx to Manhattan, became members of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and began to buy paintings, particularly modern paintings from such people as Andy Warhol, Franz Kline, Willem de Kooning and Jackson Pollock.

America had nearly seven years to form militant women's groups... bar-burning groups, groups to put men in their place.

By the middle of the 1960s, they knew all the right people, were invited to all the right parties and were in residence on Fifth Avenue in a duplex apartment. They also had a brand new glass and wood home designed for them in East Hampton by the celebrated architect Paul Lester Weiner. Betty Friedan's remarkable book The Feminine Mystique was published in 1963. And by 1970, the year I am referring to, America had nearly seven years to debate the meaning of it, to form militant women's groups, bra burning groups, groups to put men in their place and organizations with names such as Women Strike for Equality. A group with exactly that name held a fundraising party at the Sculls' home that August. It was two blocks away from where I lived at that time. I went. But after being there just about an hour, I got into an argument with the Sculls about Dan's Papers and I left. I should have stayed. I missed the excitement.

It seems, all these years later, so funny how different people have such different perspectives about things. The Sculls and Betty Friedan, who spoke there, and Jill Johnson and Gloria Steinem, who were also there, all had matters of global importance on their minds. There was a lot of shouting, a lot of speechmaking.

I, on the other hand, had come to this party because it was one of those events where wealthy and important people assembled, where there was free food, fine conversation, excellent artwork and just possibly a place where I could showcase my new publication, Dan's Papers. I was a young publisher.

In other words, I was a gate crasher. A gate crasher with a dozen copies of the paper under my arm, and a great desire to succeed. I put my stack of papers on an antique chair by the front door. Take one. People did.

After an hour, during what seemed to me a particularly boring speech about something, a servant came over and told me that the Sculls would prefer that I not give out my publication at their private party and to please remove it from the premises.

Removing it from the premises, of course, meant removing myself from the premises. I was steamed. I was being escorted out to my car. And so I went home.

One hour later, Jill Johnson, a feminist who at that time was a reporter for the Village Voice, took off her clothes and jumped naked, or some say just partially naked, into the Scull's swimming pool. This was something you did not do at a party. Certainly it was something I had not thought to do at this party. But she did it. And thus, having made that statement, the Women's Movement in the United States was launched and this culture forever changed.

For those reading this who may not be familiar with what the Women's Movement was about, I can report, from the front, that it was not an easy time. It went on for about twenty five years and during that time, the divorce rate went through the ceiling, men became depressed and angry, women went to jail on principle, and many women declared men to be the enemy. Women wanted history to be called herstory at least half the time. Many women abandoned homemaking. Many women became sexual predators. They had a group called Off Our Backs. Women said, and it was true, that Ginger Rogers did every dance step Fred Astaire did, only backwards and in high heels. You could go to the movies, in Westhampton, Southampton and East Hampton, and the feature film might be something shockingly hardcore and x-rated just as it well might be Bonnie and Clyde. Romance was in big trouble. Families were in big trouble. And the young men were being sent to Vietnam to die in a war far, far away.

It wasn't until 1985 that the country seemed to discover that it wasn't about equality, it was about equal opportunity, and it wasn't about ending all differences between people but celebrating our differences. Even Betty Friedan herself, observing the wreckage the Women's Movement had caused while making its statement, wrote a book about what had now become obvious, that we were all, men and women, in this together. Let's see if we can work this out.

Life has been a whole lot easier in America since 1985. But it has not been easier for the Sculls. They too became caught up in the Women's Movement and they commenced a bitter divorce battle just five years after their famous party, the "Shot Heard Round the World" party.

In the end, Ethel Scull won much of the art work they had collected, but somehow, they were spending more than was coming in and all their riches fell away. So did the attention that was being paid to them by the art world. The last I heard of them, the entire collection was being auctioned off to pay debts. Then Robert Scull died. And this past week Ethel Scull died, alone, in her one room apartment in Manhattan.

Today, Dan's Papers thrives, welcome in stacks at many private parties, and, I think it is fair to say, men and women are thriving, too. Men are logical, rational and they can unscrew ketchup tops. Women are emotional, intuitive, and they live six years longer than men. That is on average. Of course there are sensitive, intuitive men and there are logical, rational women.

For the most part, though, we are different, different as Venus is from Mars, and its all to be wondered over and celebrated and laughed at and dealt with. Now we have a whole different set of problems. Pass the ketchup. •

What Dan's Papers Employees Think Of And Will Be Doing With Their Tax Returns

By Amy Johns

Many of us have received, or are anticipating receiving, our $300 check from the Treasury promised to us by President Bush. There is a certain amount of controversy surrounding this small payment to the American people. To some, the check is a welcomed bonus and will be cashed and quickly spent, which is what Bush intended in his hope to boost the economy. Others, however, almost as a means of protesting this "bribe" (as they see it) are putting their $300 directly into their savings accounts, further increasing our national deficit. Curious as to how employees at Dan's Papers feel about the issue, I decided to ask around. Here are some of their initial reactions to the check and how they plan on using it.

First, I bumped into Marion Weiss who told me that the $300 will go to pay taxes on her house. She commented that, "The government did something right for once by delivering it the exact day they said they would, the 27th of August." There is nothing more satisfying, and surprising for that matter, then getting a check on time!

I then visited the desk of Leif Neubauer, who received his check about a month ago. "I was stoked," he said. "The money is gone. It went right to credit card debt." Melissa Wettengel was similarly exited when she got her check, but had no inclination toward practicality. "The money has been spent already on dinner and drinks and a good weekend." Certainly not a bad way to spend a little extra cash. Maria Tennariello sees the $300 as a bit of play money as well, and told me that when she gets her check, she will "go out and spend $300 on face creams and cosmetics."

> "...it means absolutely nothing to me. What can I do with $300 besides put gas in my car or eat for a week?"

I asked James Wolfram if he had gotten his check yet and although he hadn't, he says that he will feel "pleased and relieved" when he does. "I'll put it toward the security deposit on my rental house."

The $300 will be "a big help to my financial situation," Tom Haskell said. "I'm going to pay off some bills with it." However, even though the check will assist in paying the bills, it isn't overly important to Tom. "If $300 from last year's taxes doesn't get back to me, I don't see any problem. I see where my taxes go – positive changes on Long Island." Michelle Groblewski will most definitely welcome an extra $300 and says, "If I get my check, I will spend it on my school loans, which are ASTRONOMICAL!" This is, undoubtedly, something many of us can relate to.

Bob Ballot joked that his reaction to the check will have him pegged as a misogynist, but shares his thoughts despite possible scars to his reputation. "I couldn't cash it without my wife's signature and so I guess she gets a cut too!" Don't worry Bob, we won't hold this one against you.

A few people here at Dan's weren't quite as "stoked" as Leif to receive their check from the government. Arlene Weir disclosed to me that she "didn't need it. I don't know why the government is in a deficit. It's a payoff and the government is now talking about touching the social security monies, and for what? $300? Amy Fitzgerald had a similar opinion. "I didn't get my check yet, but it means absolutely nothing to me. What can I do with $300 besides put gas in the car or eat for a week? I do that anyway. I feel it was a slap in the face to all of middle and lower income America." Lisa Taylor, although not quite as adamantly opposed to the check, sees it as somewhat fraudulent. "I'm going to cash it and probably use it towards my student loan. I feel it's supposed to be some sort of a treat for poor people to give them 'extra money' to do something with, but there's no such thing as 'extra money.'"

Well, I don't have much "extra money" these days to speak of either, so when I get my check, I think I'll put it directly into the bank, where it won't stay for long with my spending habits. •

Who's Here:

Charlie and Jerry O'Connell Actors

Lise Visser

Actors Charlie and Jerry O'Connell are home for a visit with their parents, Linda and Michael, at their hilltop home in Montauk. Walking out on the upper deck you can see all the way to New England.

Jerry, the older of the two brothers, has been in numerous feature films, including hits Jerry McGuire, Stand By Me, Mission to Mars and Body Shots. He began his career as Quinn Mallory on the popular television series, Sliders, in 1995, and Charlie joined him a year later.

"It was great because I got to work with Jerry every day. It was like summer camp," said Charlie. "We lived together, so we both got up at the same time, which was the ungodly hour of 6 a.m. and we shared the driving. We'd say, 'You drive to work and I'll drive home,' so one of us would drive and the other would be able to sleep." Charlie remembers those days fondly, despite the lack of sleep they suffered. "It's so much better when you work together. Everyday, we laughed until we cried."

Jerry and Charlie are on the Web, of course. "When I did Sliders," said Charlie, "all of a sudden a web site popped up, called 'Charlie's Angels!' We suspected Mom, but she doesn't know how to use a computer!"

The O'Connells are a close family, so it is not surprising that Linda O'Connell is her sons' biggest fan. Although she doesn't keep a scrapbook, Linda has videotapes of everything the boys have done. She's also justly proud of Charlie's accomplishments as a fine artist.

"We have paintings I did as a kid," said Charlie. "You know, if you don't keep up with it, you lose it. Dad is definitely the best artist in the family." Linda produces a canvas painted by Charlie when he and Jerry took a course at Southampton College together. It is a portrait of the old mansion set back on a hill. The building is currently used as an administration office.

Although Charlie and Jerry studied art at Southampton, they studied acting in New York. Charlie discussed his background as a drama student. "I went to NYU for drama where I studied with Lee Strasbourg. I also studied at PAW (Practical Aesthetics Workshop), which was started by David Mamet," said Charlie.

Charlie "was the Captain of the Fencing Team at NYU when we brought home the NCA Trophy. I was very proud of that; it was my big accomplishment in college! I also received a Leadership Award; I don't know who I was leading, but they decided to give me one!"

He has made good use of his fencing skills in his career. "I've used it on Sliders and unexpectedly on Days of Our Lives. One of the required classes in college was Stage Combat, where they teach you how to fake fight with swords. This came very easily to me since it was very much like the real thing. My instructor told me 'you're doing great, you really have this stuff down in class. You can come, you don't have to come, you can do whatever you want, but I'm doing Days of Our Lives – I'm the Stunt Director – and we'll be needing your assistance on Tuesdays and Thursdays!' We had a room where we had to work out the stage combat where we leaped up and down over tables and obstacles."

The highlight of Charlie's career so far has been his role in Dude, Where's My Car? He played the bully, a role that he relished. Charlie remembers having "a great time. It was a funny movie and kids really seemed to like it." Working as John Behan's assistant in the East Hampton Town Sailing Program, Charlie says, "you couldn't rent Dude, Where's My Car? in Montauk; they all seemed to be rented out by all of my students. I got a kick out of that."

The house we are sitting in was built by Linda and Michael for the family as the boys wanted more time in Montauk. "We had this house since I was 12," says Charlie. "We built it. We came out here every summer since we were small, when my Dad had his two weeks off. We'd come out here and stay at the Maisonette, right on the beach. As we grew older, we wanted to spend more time here. Mom was a teacher and she had the summer off, so we were able to stay for a month in a rented house. Finally, we were old enough to demand a stay for the whole summer. It's our favorite place in the world, especially when it's not cold or rainy. I'm so busy all day doing the things that I love. Montauk's got the greatest beaches. If there's no surf, then I go fishing. Or golfing if it's not too windy. Montauk's got the greatest golf course."

Jerry compares growth in Montauk to a puppy. "If you have a puppy and you go away for a few weeks, then come back, you're astonished at how much the puppy has grown. It's the same thing with Montauk. Every time I come back there are more and more people. I have been going further and further East on the beach."

In comparing Montauk to living in West Hollywood, "it's not the same breeze where we are, because it isn't coming straight off the water. We're about forty minutes from the water there, but normally we're out by the pool. It's just not the beach. I don't miss the cold weather at all. If I want cold weather I'll drive to it, sit for ten minutes, then jump back in the car...come to my senses!"

They each have an apartment, "one on top of the other, sort of like adult bunk beds! We have good friends out there, too, although we do miss New York. We have to be in LA; if you want to be an actor, no one's going to hire you in Montauk."

Photos are spread out on the kitchen table. "This is Machupicchu. We just did a show there with Kelly from Survivor. One picture shows a colorfully clad group with Jerry, and Charlie, who is holding a baby llama. "I recited the line from Caddy Shack to him about the Dali Lhama!"

The elevation was heady stuff. "When we got there we had to take medication for it; it's 12,000 feet up. It took us a couple of days to adjust to the elevation; you'd walk up just one flight of stairs and it would just hit you; you would have to stop and rest."

It is pretty there. It was hot during the day and colder at night. We went power sailing, then we were supposed to go bungie jumping from a hot air balloon, but, luckily for us, the condition were such that we couldn't do it!"

There's a picture of a pretty girl in front of a small house. "She was one of the producers. Pretty cute for a producer!"

A llama peers over the precipice that overlooks the ruins, "which are not as old as they look. They say that it is the Lost City of the Incas. It's divided into two areas: the Upper Class (this is pointed out) and the Lower Class. It's a spectacular looking ruin. It's got a great spiritual feel to it. The only way to get there is through Lima, then through Cousco, then from Cousco we had to take a train; it's the train or a chopper. Once you get there, it's a half hour drive, constantly back and forth in an S up a steep, never-ending cliff. We wondered how those bus drivers could drive so fast around those turns! Once yo get to the top you see a lot of backpackers."

The brothers have traveled widely together. "Jobs like this are great. Kelly has the best opportunity because her job takes her to the places that should be on everyone's to do list in life...just check 'em off and check 'em off. You get to go to great places tricks of the trade, such as employing the lower third of the television screen for graphics and using two projectors rather than one to visually enhance the movement of the speaker.

The Gold Medal Award was given by the International Radio and Television Society to Hewitt and his 60 Minutes Correspondents, Andy Rooney and Dan Rather. This, in 1988, was a first in TV news broadcasting.

Hewitt's association with Andy Rooney began twenty-five years ahead of 60 Minutes. In his service in the Merchant Marine during World War II Hewitt served as an editor for Stars and Stripes, an NYU drop out working as "the youngest correspondent accredited to General Dwight David Eisenhower's SHAEF headquarters." In the London office Hewitt encountered "a reporter named Andy Rooney, who for all the world looked like one of those typical American kids on a recruiting poster." Rooney was in Europe at that time covering the Eighth Air Force.

Hewitt describes a terrifying near death experience in the North Atlantic where his convoy was decimated by "a wolf pack of German subs." Other stories have been told by high profile, extraordinarily successful people who went on to greatness following this kind of an experience.

According to Hewitt, Americans are "stuck on" thinking about ideas in terms of whether they are liberal or conservative, "although these are positions that most people don't hold. The sayer can't say 'is this politically correct or incorrect?'

On the unborn, the "rights of the born carry more weight. The advancement of stem cell research; is this 'left leaning?' Or is it a good or a bad idea? Scientists should be making that determination" in lieu of "religious leaders, conservatives, or liberals."

The first televised presidential "confrontations" between Nixon and Kennedy "ruined politics in America. That was "the night television and politics became engaged and the marriage that followed was a disaster for 'free elections.' What we have now in their place are 'expensive elections'...they married us for love and they married us for money." To illustrate the road we have taken in American politics, a comparison is made between FDR's campaign in 1932, costing $2.2 million ($26 million now), and the most recent NY Senate race where the candidates spent upwards of $100 million, and the Gore-Bush contest at approximately $1 billion.

Finally, "television is too big for its britches" which is "how you trip over yourself, as we did on election night 2000."

milk boxes grow on trees?

People worry about global warming and the rise of sea level putting us all underwater in five hundred years. Five hundred years from now, creatures from outer space will land here and find that we died buried under hundreds and thousands of tons of indestructible white plastic tote boxes.

"Looks like some sort of religious artifacts," one of them will say. US MAIL. We mail 'US' to the Lord. What a terrible way to die."

Meanwhile, the descendants of the man who won the original contract will be continuing to produce these boxes on the moon by the tens of millions. No one realized the manufacturing contract was self renewing. And now there's another space cargo load ready for launch. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander # 173

Shelter Island Internet

I don't know about the rest of the word, but if I don't have Internet access, I feel like I'm living without a phone. I sign on once or twice a day. I have a buddy lists that rivals the population of Shelter Island, hey wait, it is Shelter Island! Plus a few other strays.

But it's important not to get addicted to anything, even the Internet. Therefore, I have compiled a list clues to determine if you're spending just a little too much time on the Internet, specifically America On Line. Many of these are from me but most are from other Islanders on my buddy list who will steal my mouse if I reveal them.

You know you've spending too much time online if...Someone in the IGA tells you a joke and you say "LOL" out loud.

You have to cock your head 90 degrees when you smile :)

Three words: Carpal Tunnel Syndrome.

If you are man and see a woman at the Chequit that you wish to meet, your first thought is to IM her. And your pick-up line is, "What are you wearing?"

When you have sex, you no longer are concerned about sexually transmitted diseases.

You walk into a room, and if it has more than 23 people, you inform management that there is an error.

Your boss has to remind you that the word "I" should be capitalized.

You watch TV with the closed captioning turned on.

Your kids are eating cereal morning, noon, and night.

When someone says, "What did you say?" You reply, "Scroll up!"

You find yourself sneaking away to the computer in the middle of the night when everyone else is asleep.

You know more about your AOL friends' daily routines than you do your own spouse's.

When you hear some really hot Island gossip, you do a group send immediately.

You find yourself lying to others about your time on-line and when they complain that your phone was busy you claim the cat knocked it off the hook.

You change your screen names so much that you have to look at your own profile to see who you are.

You go into labor and you stop to type a special E-mail to let everyone know you're going to be away.

You sign on and immediately get 10 IMs from other Islanders asking you why you're not at work.

You look at an annoying real life person and wish you had your ignore button handy.

You bring a bag lunch and a cooler to the computer.

You talk to someone in the Post Office who is from your buddy list and you know their screen name, but cannot remember their real name.

Your buddy list has over 50 people on it.

You wake up in the morning and the first thing you do is get online before you have your first cup of coffee.

You ask the Pharmacy if No-Doze comes in suppository form to keep your butt awake.

You don't know where the time has gone, you only signed on for a minute.

Your relationship with your cyber lover online has gone farther than any real one you have had on Island or off.

You get up at 2 am to go to the bathroom but turn on the computer instead.

You don't even notice anymore when someone makes a typo.

You stop typing whole words and use shortcuts like u, y, 4, c, r.

You type faster than you think.

You can actually read and follow all the names of the cast that scrolls up your TV screen at the end of a movie.

You double click your TV remote.

You know what a "snert" is.

You set your kitchen on fire while cooking dinner because you wanted to "check your mail" and while there you "just wanted to see who was online". (This is such a great story, I am hoping she will let me tell the whole thing someday)

You have a vanity car tag with the Shelter Island map AND your screen name on it.

You have this name on your AOL buddy list: SallyFlynnWrites and it's on them, you know?" Charlie isn't sure when he will plan another trip to Machupicchu, "but I would have planned the first one if they hadn't. I than my lucky stars on that one."

Given a choice between television and movie work, Charlie is clear. "I'm happy when I'm working. Either is great, although one will generally hear movies as a choice. But I think I really got spoiled with Sliders. It's great when you have a show where you can do 18 or 23 episodes in a year. Every week is different and you could be pushing the producer and say, 'hey, you know that kid's probably pretty good for that part.' And it's your best friend! And you hang out with the crew. I would love to have my own series where I could just have fun working."

Jerry directed for the first time on the Sliders series, an episode that co-starred Duff McKagan of Guns N' Roses, and Tommy Chong of Cheech and Chong. "It was the most fun I had all season."

Doing commercials in childhood was the beginning of their acting career. "Mom thought if we would do commercials growing up we could pay for college. Eventually Jerry was lucky enough to get the part in Stand By Me as Vern Tessio, in which he became, coincidentally, the subject of study in his first year of film school at NYU.

Where will Charlie and Jerry be seen next? "The next thing we're doing is The New Guy. We're in a couple of scenes. We just play a couple of jock guys." In the film they beat up legendary skateboarder Tony Hawk. "We love being guys like that! Now I'm a skateboard fan for life! D. J. Qualls from Road Trip plays the lead." Jerry would like it to open in Montauk.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN DAN'S PAPERS

Dan Rattiner

In the autumn of 1904, millionaire Harry K. Thaw walked into a New York City restaurant, raised a pistol and in front of all the patrons shot architect Stanford White between the eyes.

Jean Harris

Thaw was 48 years old at the time and White 42, and Thaw had recently completed paying White his architect's fee for designing Thaw's new sports arena known as Madison Square Garden. According to Thaw, who dropped his pistol and peacefully surrendered to the police after the killing, White had not only collected his favors of Thaw's wife Evelyn, who just happened to be seated next to White in the restaurant.

The trial of Harry K. Thaw, which followed shortly thereafter, was thought to be the most sensational trial of the century. His wife, Evelyn, who was all of 18 years old at the time, wept on the stand, and successfully convinced the jurors of what a beast Stanford White was. Thaw was acquitted and went to live a long fruitful life. Evelyn was in her eighties when she died in 1952.

But if the Stanford White murder was thought to be the most scandalous of the century, it has at least been rivaled by the shooting of Dr. Hi Tarnower, The Scarsdale Diet doctor who made millions from writing "The Scarsdale Diet," and who was reputedly done in by his mistress Jean Harris in the bedroom.

Just the other day, I sat in a booth in the Sip 'n Soda on Hampton Road and read some of the testimony of this juicy trial in the newspaper.

"Isn't it a fact, the prosecutor shouted at Jean Harris, "that the doctor told you he preferred Lynne Tryforos over you?"

"No," Jean Harris replied."

"Didn't he say, 'God damn it, Jean, I want you to stop bothering me'?"

"No!" she replied. Then, turning to the judge, she asked. "Is this going to go on forever?"

There was talk of Jean Harris finding the nightgown of her rival Lynne and ripping it up. There was testimony about the doctor leaping across the bed, about pistol shots that hit the walls, about telephones knocked off their hooks.

I turned the page.

Jean Harris was the headmistress of a fashionable girl's prep school in Pennsylvania. She was about eighteen months shy of being sixty years old. Dr. Tarnower's next birthday would have made him seventy. What?

Over coffee, I read Jean Harris' last letter to Dr. Tarnower, a ten-page affair that she sent to him by registered mail just a few days before the shooting. The prosecution had somehow gotten hold of it.

"I am distraught as I write this," the prosecutor read from the letter aloud to the jury. "Your phone call to tell me you preferred the company of a vicious, adulteress, psychotic was topped by a call from the Dean of Students ten minutes later and has kept me awake for almost 36 hours..."

"I haven't played the slave for you, I would never have committed adultery for you – but I have added a dimension in your life and given you pleasure and dignity, as you have me..."

"Twice I have taken money from your wallet - each time to pay for sick damage done to my property by your psychotic whore. I don't have the money to afford a sick playmate - you do. She took a brand new nightgown that I paid $40 for and covered it with bright orange stains...

"You have been what you very carefully set out to be, Hi, the most important human being in my life and that will never change. You keep me in control by threatening me with banishment – an easy threat which you know I couldn't live with so I stay home alone while you make love to someone who has almost totally destroyed me...

"The gulf between us seems wide on the phone but the moment I see you it's as though we had been together forever."

Wow, what sizzling stuff. I looked from my coffee, and my eyes focused on a small, elderly grey haired lady sitting in the booth across from me. She had small rimless glasses that perched on the edge of her nose and she appeared to be about eight. Had she just sad down? I couldn't be sure about that, but there was no doubt about what she was doing. She was looking me right in the eye, smiling, and stirring a cup of tea very slowly and provocatively. When she winked, I got up quickly, paid my bill, and ran out to the sidewalk.

BANDITS

We've seen buddy movies before but these buddies are something else! We were invited to a screening in New York, last Tuesday, of Barry Levinson's new MGM film Bandits and Barry got up before the screening to alert all those attending that this was a work in progress, so if we saw glitches or jump cuts not to fret. I was laughing too hard to notice. The buddies are bank robbers Bruce Willis and Billy Bob Thornton and they both fall for the same woman, the bored and quirky housewife played by Cate Blanchett (and wait until you hear her sing). Now Bruce is Bruce and you can expect wise cracks and much macho in the character but Billy Bob as a hypochondriac criminal who takes on the symptoms of every disease he hears about to go with the many ailments he already has, is worth the price of admission. After the screening we all went to a post screening party at Osterio del Circo sponsored by Manhattan File.

The Amazing Maze

Farming Family Keeps Them "Agritained" With This Natural Wonder

By Lise Visser

On a recent Sunday in the picturesque setting of the Harbes Family Farm's Jamesport location, I talked with Ed Harbes about how his operation has evolved over the years.

In 1989 the first Harbes farmstand was set up with ten year old Jason Harbes, "manning the vegetable stand that's in Mattituck. It was humble at the beginning, but it was a start. It was my entry into retailing and as the years have gone by, I've learned to enjoy retailing and its opportunities. Little by little we've grown over the years."

In that first year Jason's buddy, Danny Stasuikewicz, came to work with him. More recently, according to Ed Harbes, "someone interviewed Danny and he made the comment that 'the stand is still the same but they've just expanded it about ten times.' The products are similar and the philosophy of good products and friendly service remain the same."

"We have eight children, and as they become old enough they all get drafted into service at one time or another. It's always good to research what other people have done and to learn from their experience. I have attempted to keep on top of farm-related marketing across the country and implement ideas as they seem appropriate in this area."

The Harbes Farm not only provides produce these days, but with the addition of hayrides and a corn maze, it is also a source of local "agritainment."

"My favorite thing about the retail business, as opposed to the wholesale, is that if you do a nice job on the retail level, you have the gratification of seeing happy customers and hearing compliments. We've received a lot of compliments on our operation here in Jamesport. I remember one woman saying to me, 'I want to thank you. This is really great, this entertainment opportunity that you provide here. You probably don't hear it that often, but it's really a wonderful family experience.'

...has anyone gotten lost in there yet? "Oh yes! Sometimes for an hour or two... "

Did this magnificent vista spring from the vision of Monica and Ed Harbes? "Yes, I guess you could say that. I like to think that I have an eye for scenic beauty. My philosophy is if you would like to conduct a business it might as well be as aesthetically pleasing and complimentary to the area as possible, enhance the area rather than detract from it. So that's something I have attempted to do from the outset with my retail operations. The initial structure we had, for example, was the gazebo. It was small, only 14X14, but I wanted something that had rustic, aesthetically pleasing characteristics rather than just a ramshackle structure on the side of the road. The customers appreciate that."

Before the agritainment came the corn. "We have a product line of more than 30 different fruits and vegetables, but corn has always been our signature product. From the very beginning I looked into farmstands and I was quick to learn that sweet corn is by far the most popular vegetable. It is the number one selling vegetable on farm stands. To have the best sweet corn possible seemed to make a great deal of sense to me. So I did research to try to find out what kind of sweet corn would have the most appeal, and I came across a fairly new class of corn called the super sweet type. That's what we started with approximately ten years ago. I always try new varieties every year. I try to pick out varieties that have not only sweetness but good corn flavor and eating characteristics.

FRESH SEAFOOD- LAND FARE- SUSHI - OVER 100 WINES - OPEN 7 DAYS, LUNCH & DINNER

By The Glass...

With Susan Simm

Long Island winemakers are excited about this year's harvest. Low rainfall and warm temperatures (while stressful to some vegetable crops) have resulted in vines that are essentially disease-free, with little or no mildew.

"The general consensus among growers is that we've had a good growing season to date with the right balance of rainfall and heat. (This has resulted) in healthy grapes and an earlier than usual veraison (grape ripening)," said Harold Watts, Long Island Wine Council president and owner/winemaker of Ternhaven Cellars in Greenport. "If we have a month of good sunshine like last year, this year's vintage could be one of the best ever."

Roman Roth, winemaker and general manager at Wölffer Estate in Sagaponack, is equally optimistic.

"This year's growing season has been ideal, with a nice mixture of sun and rain," he said. "This year's harvest is poised for something great with a little bit of luck and six weeks of sunshine. We are currently about ten days ahead of schedule, which is encouraging as we're looking at 45-50 days from mid-veraison to picking. (This) provides for ideal maturation of flavors and tannins."

Proud producer of the award-winning '97 Blanc de Blanc Brut, Ralph Pugliese, owner of Pugliese Vineyards in Cutchogue, comments, "We tasted our champagne grapes (pinot noir and chardonnay) last week and will be picking towards the end of the first week in September, a week earlier than usual."

Russell Hearn, co-principal along with Bernie Sussman and Mark Lieb (owner of Lieb Cellars in Cutchogue) of the Premium Wine Group crush facitlity in Mattituck and consulting winemaker to Pellegrini Vineyard, is more cautious but equally hopeful.

"Until it's in the tank we don't know how good the wine is going to be," he said. "However, I'm very optimistic at this point. We've had a good growing season (and) fruit set was at or below average, which has provided a looser, less compact cluster across the board. (This) should raise quality at a lower yield."

Vineyard manager Wojtek Majewski, of Martha Clara in Mattituck, is thrilled with this year's growing season, so far.

"Our whites are 100% through verasion, reds about 70%. The growing season has been wonderful for all grape varities... We are comfortable with our crop levels and believe they are at their optimum for producing another premium vintage," said Majewski. "We start harvesting our pinot noir around the second week of September for our sparkling wines."

With the hurricaine season almost over, we can start to breathe a little more easily. Dire forecasts of "storms of the century" have, fortunately, proven groundless to date. Now, if we make it through September, we'll be home free.

Stay tuned for further comments from the field in next week's By The Glass. In the meantime, "We all hope for a fall like last year," said Majewski.

Here's to the harvest of '01. '01? Cheers.

Dan's North Fork

Unfortunately, a lot of times the corn that grows the best often doesn't taste the best, and many farmers enjoy growing corn that yields prolifically. The problem with that is the customer doesn't care how well the corn yields, they care how the corn tastes. That will bring 'em back. So the varieties I grow-they're more difficult to grow-don't yield quite as well, but hopefully they have the best eating characteristics which people are willing to come back for."

Can the names of the varieties be told? "I would, but you wouldn't be familiar with them anyway, so I'll keep it a thickly veiled trade secret for now...it's a super sweet type of corn.

"One of the things we do is we use sugar instead of fertilizer to grow it." Really? "No, not really!

At Harbes, a family can enjoy a well rounded experience. "We've had animals for the last six years or so so that children can interact with them. We try to keep them to a limited number, so that the place doesn't smell like a goat farm, but just enough so everyone has something to pet. We have a couple of goats and a few bunnies at this point. Goats are such sociable animals that they like to eat out of your hand. It's a lot of fun. We have some people who stop by just to say hello to the animals."

Aerial view of the maze in Jamesport

The popular Great Pumpkin can also be found here. It's one of those air pumped jumper rooms, this one with balloons in it. "You and I might not want to go inside and chase balloons; still, to a five year old it's a great sport.

"We're attempting a variety, especially at this Jamesport location. There's enough things for a family to do for an hour or so and have a pleasant afternoon in the country. On Sunday afternoons we have live music starting on Sept. 1st here. It just adds up to a bucolic Sunday afternoon where you can sit and listen to the music and enjoy the aesthetic beauty of the North Fork.

"We've been doing corn mazes for the last six years. Every year I try to find ways to make it more entertaining. And this year in one of my travels I met a fellow, Adrian Fisher, from England that specializes in corn maze designs. He has, oh, maybe half a dozen or so across the United States and in Europe. This year's maze has a number of things that you don't find in the amateur corn maze such as a 70 foot bridge and a 24 foot observation tower with a cowboy up on top to look for people that might have been in the maze a little bit too long and would like a little direction to get out!

Has anyone been lost in there yet? "Oh yes! Sometimes for an hour or two, but they usually find their way out rather easily."

There are activities people can enjoy in the maze. "There's a mini hay bale maze which is surprisingly challenging. There's a cactus toss where you take small circular ropes and try to toss them onto the loops of the cactus, and you'll also have an opportunity to practice steer roping. And then we have the five acres of maze itself which we opened on Labor Day weekend."

How is a maze like this one created? "Well, my oldest daughter, Evelyn-along with a crew of fellows-spent approximately two weeks in August carving it out with machetes and hoes. She wasn't sure how it turned out, but about two weeks ago I had the privilege of taking a helicopter ride with a camera and I was pleasantly surprised. to look. It looks beautiful from the air. It's a cowboy with a lariat ready to throw a rope. I understand quite a few helicopters and aircraft have enjoyed going over the top. It says, 'Harbes Wild West' cut in the corn."

What can we expect at the Harbes Family Farm in the future? "That is difficult to visualize. The biggest factor is that my family will be older and might move on to other careers. So the future depends on how many children desire to participate in the family business in the future. I'm optimistic that a number of them will. But a project like this, especially with the multiple locations, requires a team effort on the part of all the family. For example, this year, my son, David, managed the Jamesport location. My son, Daniel, who is twelve years old, managed the Cutchogue location. My daughter, Jessica, who is eighteen years old, managed the Mattituck location. And of course, we have many other wonderful employees. But without that core of family participation, it's difficult to imagine what would happen. I'm optimistic about our future in agritainment so to speak. To me, it seems like the new 'best use' for agricultural land on the North Fork of Long Island. Today more and more people are disconnected from their agricultural heritage and they enjoy the opportunity for visiting a friendly farm particularly in the fall. They come at harvest time when the leaves are turning color, pick a pumpkin as a trophy souvenir, or bring back a basket full of fresh fruits and vegetables. They walk through a corn field without being yelled at. They're welcomed and encouraged to participate in agricultural beauty.

This seems to be a new area for farmers, to provide a useful service to the public, and, of course, that is the key of any business, to provide a pleasant agritainment experience seems to be a good utilization of agricultural resources at this time.

"I am thankful that we have been able to find a niche in local agriculture because many of my farming friends and neighbors have had a lot of difficulty, over the last 30 years especially. The statistics speak of that. There used to be 50,000 acres of potatoes on Long Island; now we're down to approximately 5,000. There used to be many farm families on Long Island and slowly they're diverting to other things, not because they no longer like farming, but because the economic opportunities are different than they once were. You would think with fewer farmers there would be a better opportunity for those that are left, but actually the contrary seems to be true as Long Island loses its agricultural identity. Long Island potatoes were once a household name. Now it's hard to find Long Island potatoes, even on Long Island. I'm thankful that we've been able to find a new area of potential for the future."

Ed Harbes points to a group using the playground pieces on the lawn and smiles, "You see, that family's having a good time. That's what it's all about."

Dan's North Fork

THE 2ND ANNUAL AGRICULTURAL HERITAGE FESTIVAL

At 12 noon on Sunday, September 9, the Second Annual Agricultural Heritage Festival was held in Riverhead, New York, where crowds of onlookers lined Main Street, waiting for the long parade of antique cars, fire trucks and farm tractors.

I followed children holding tightly onto strings of green balloons and made my way through the hundreds of locals and out-of-towners that sat on curbs and flower boxes, looking to the west for the first sign of the parade, which celebrated our agricultural heritage.

The excited expression on a little boy's face as the giant yellow wheels of a bright green Deere tractor (dated 1836) rolled by with its powerful, rumbling engine, proved the Festival's success.

This year's Grand Marshall at the Festival was Dan "Farmer Dan" Donahue of Calverton, whose family has farmed in Riverhead Town since the 1850's. Dan has carried on the tradition and says he's been around a while– farming since he was "knee-high." He lives by nature's rules.

Dan helps other farmers with old equipment that has been out of production, and still runs and repairs a 1907 Riverhead-built horse surrey and a horse-drawn sled named "Old Jingle Bells."

Also making an appearance at the Festival was The Long Island Antique Power Association, founded in 1993 by collectors of old farm machinery, who are also on a mission to preserve early power equipment and attend events around the tri-state area from April through the Christmas season.

Last year's Grand Marshall was farm advocate Joseph Gergela, executive director of Long Island Farm Bureau, who is responsible for contributing to the passing of the L.I. Pine Barrens Protection Act and for the reduction of assessment of farmland in exchange for leaving land as open space.

The Festival's Second Annual Riverhead Agricultural Queen, Ashley McCafferty, is a senior at Riverhead High School. Admirably, she is a cheerleader and honor student who volunteers for Special Olympics every year.

Adding to the pleasant atmosphere was a banjo player who strolled the street playing music celebrating the history of the laborious job of farming, and I noticed a couple of weathered farmers wearing long beards and overalls who obviously enjoyed the encouragement.

Farmers and landowners are proud of their heritage, which is reflected in the village names of Riverhead; Aquebogue means "the end of the water place" and Baiting Hollow got its name from Hollow Pond. "Bait" is an Old English word for giving food or drink to livestock, and the area served this purpose for cattle being driven west along the north shore.

The festival is truly an educational experience, where we honor the Native Americans and early settlers of 1662 who had visions of our soil's potential. We continue to benefit today in the continuing growth of grape-growing, sod-farming, duck farms, herb farms, horse farms, etc.

This year over 200 people marched or rode in the half-hour long parade, according to Town Supervisor Robert Kozakiewicz, who attempted to spell his name for me, and confirmed, "As you can see, I'm a nice Polish boy who grew up out here."

There was plenty of live entertainment on the Peconic Riverfront, including the music of the Straight Jackets, juggling clowns, pony rides, and an acrobat on trampoline.

At the bubble-blowing table I spoke with 5-year old Jillian Santora from Basking Ridge, New Jersey, and her brothers Marc and Chris, who were arguing over who blew the biggest bubble. (It was definitely Jillian.)

Aside from the farm equipment on display, there were many family-oriented activities to attend, such as marshmallow roasts, hayrides, potato sack races and a wine-tasting tent from the North Fork's finest for the adults.

With so much fun going on, we must remember that farming life today is not necessarily simple. There are still many challenges to contend with. Aside from dealing with the weather, expenses and problems with crops; farmers also have to deal with the changing of local zoning laws and its economic ramifications.

When it's time to harvest this year's apples, grapes, squash, potatoes and pumpkins, East Enders and visitors, alike, can share in the bounty of the good earth.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

This week I decided to get together with two dear old friends, Annie and Paula and do some shopping and lunch. So off we go...

Annie loves T-shirts and I decided that I would drag her out to Westhampton T-Shirts on Main Street in Westhampton Beach for some real deals. They are having a "summer clearance sale" and there are lot's to choose from. Look for silk-screened and embroidered heavyweight cotton sweatshirts that originally were priced at $35 to $45, now slashed to clearance prices of $15. The T-shirts are clearance priced at $4. Well, should I tell you how many we bought?

Over to Hildreth's Department Store on Main Street in Southampton, their Clearance Center on North Main and House and Garden Center on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton where a "summer clearance" sale is going on with up to 50% off on selected merchandise. So...Paula and Annie picked up lots of super buys here for their homes and I enjoyed the window shopping this week. If you love teak, you can save up to 35% on selected items, too.

At Old Town Crossing on Main Street in Southampton you will find it all under one roof. This store has a large and fine selection of antique and custom furnishings ready for your home. There is also a design service available and they deliver anywhere.

A quick stop at Aboff's in Southampton to pick up some paint for my guestroom. My entire house is painted lilac so I decided to paint the arbors on my decks lilac too... All the Benjamin Moore exterior stains are $4 off regular prices. So I decided this was the time to get it done.

Speaking of outdoors, now is also the time to do some invisible fencing for the safety of your pets...Check out Canine Control Company on Main Street in Southampton for invisible fencing and more. Call 1-800-Your-Dog for information.

Time to change window treatments? Stop at Windows & Walls Unlimited on County Road 39 in Southampton for some fresh, new ideas. There is up to 60% off on Hunter Douglas window fashions, Duette, Honeycomb shades, Country Woods, Lightlines, mini blinds and wood blinds.What a deal!

In East Hampton on Three Mile Harbor Road, the new location for the famous, home, james!, you will find great prices on first quality furniture, towels, throws, decorative pillows, china, antiques, holiday decorations, decorative items, table linens, gifts and much more. Stop in and say hi!

Also in East Hampton on Main Street at Mark, Fore & Strike you can indulge in ladies silk cable sweaters at a delicious price of $79. The silk cable sweater comes in the niftiest fall shades and is casual and comfy... Get a few, why don't you?

Love the trip to Sag Harbor. I just had to stop off at the Headley Studio on Madison Street to see what all the hullaballoo was about. Generous Fashions at Headley Studio is having a 25% to 50% off on Flax, M. Mac, and Liz and Jane blouses, pants and dresses in sizes 18-24. Headly is closed on Monday and Tuesday, open the rest of the week 'til 6, so get going, the early bird always gets the worm.

Getting hungry, Annie, Paula and myself decided to stop in at Giordano's on Noyac Road in Sag Harbor for a pasta dinner. Don't miss out on their special "Pasta Nights," $12.95 for a three-course dinner and entertainment to boot. Call Betty or Mike for information at 725-4000.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Fall Shopping!

MY JOB

Catering In The Hamptons

By Jeff Nichols

I have always subscribed to the theory that all jobs (with the possible exception of abducting children from hospitals) have dignity. My only hesitation about catering was predicated on the fact that I had been fired from several waitering jobs in the past. But my friend John assured me that catering was far less detail-oriented than waiting tables. Catering, he said, was simply schlepping stuff from point A to point B. Later, I found out what John meant by moving stuff; in catering you make some money but the lower back pays a price.

My first job started with hours of setting up tables, chairs and bars with no break. Then, when the time came to pass hors d'oeuvres, I thought I was doing a pretty good job considering the kitchen was saddling me with the sturgeon roe and crudités while fellow waiters were happily handing out filet mignon and jumbo shrimp. People flocked to their exciting trays while I stood there all alone with my cucumbers and salsa. How boring is that?

Actually, I didn't really care if people ignored my offerings. In fact, I got very Zen about the whole situation. I believe that most people, if not oppressed, have choices to make in life and, as a result, end up taking certain paths. Some of these paths lead to ATTENDING NICE PARTIES IN THE HAMPTONS. Others lead to WORKING AT THEM.

I was elated by my own acceptance of my predicament. Even the very real possibility of bumping into an old girlfriend didn't bother me much. So there I was, floating through the party with these thoughts running through my mind when John pulled me aside and told me, in no uncertain terms, that he had to take me off the floor. Apparently he had gotten complaints that I was making some of the guests uncomfortable.

I was shocked and indignant. There was an awkward incident with a woman who was breastfeeding her baby and I may have inadvertently bumped into a couple of guests (I tend to sway a little). But I thought things were going O.K. When I asked John what he meant by uncomfortable, he told me that I needed to smile more, to "radiate happiness" as he put it. What did he want me to act like, Mother Teresa? Here I am, a thirty-six year old lugging bus buckets and he expects me to summon the attitude that the world is my oyster. Perhaps if I came out bellowing "Hello Dolly" these people would be satisfied.

Though I was angry then, in retrospect I admit my presentation was a bit, well, off the mark. I had a sad/scared "you gotta get me outta here" look. Let's face it, the people whose paths led to ATTENDING NICE PARITES IN THE HAMPTONS didn't want the hors d'oeuvres guy making their dates nervous.

My next job was bartending. When I confided in John that I had never bartended before, he told me not to worry. At an event such as this, people would ask mostly for beer or wine or, at most, a vodka tonic.

To my horror, my first customer was a beautiful, healthy-looking woman. She walked up to me, smiling with optimism and confidence, and asked me for a "Cal 24." To this day, I still have no idea what the drink is but the sad part is, I tried to make it.

John came up at this point and saw a huge line of confused guests by my bar groping for bottles to make their own drinks while I sat there in the fetal position, my white shirt saturated with red wine. He sent me to yet another post: clearing tables.

By this point in the evening, John was losing his temper with me. "Now listen," he said. "I want you to be clearing at all times. Just keep clearing. You are not a guest at this party (my path obviously led to WORKING AT THEM) and if you don't clear these plates, no one else will."

I could not help drawing a correlation between this and Alec Baldwin, in the movie Glen Gary Glen Ross, demanding that his sales staff "always be closing." In my head I hear, always be clearing, always be clearing. So for fear of being fired, I was literally going up to people that had just gotten their food and trying to pry their plates away. One indignant elderly gentleman, when I went for his plate, actually stabbed

Swan Lake: An East End Original, Still Vital

By Roy Bradbrook

When you leave Exit 70 of the Long Island Expressway and go north en route to Swan Lake, you almost immediately are surrounded by the type of Long Island scenery reminiscent of a quieter past. Thankfully, the folk at Swan Lake have erected signs directing you to the course, which is a good idea because it is surprisingly easy to get lost around here. The long driveway up to the modest clubhouse offers you tantalizing glimpses of some of the holes and you can also see some of the water which you will almost certainly see much more of during your round.

Swan Lake is owned by the Jurgens family who built the course back in 1979 and who also own Spring Lake Golf Course. Sam Panasci, the general manager, has been at Swan Lake for the last 20 years. He explained that they do not have a Golf Professional because the course does not have a driving range due to space considerations. "We set out to give golfers excellent playing conditions at a sensible price and the course is kept to a very high standard by Dan and Keith Jurgens, who are the course superintendents, as well as being part of the family who owns the course. This course can be very challenging, especially if you choose to play off the back tees and water comes into play on many of the holes."

Before starting on your round you should consult the whimsical Swan Lake Weather Report adjacent to the cart park. It is unfailingly correct!

On the first tee, the lake and the swans, which name the course, are there, very much in view as you drive off. If you go right you will have a closer relationship with both than you might wish for. My partner played from the back tees and I played from the whites, which gave us a very good understanding of the differences from these two tees. On this first hole the difference amounts to some 50 yards and the back tee brings a lot more water into play and when the wind blows from the northerly quarter, this can be a beast of a tee shot –especially for the first of the day. When you reach the green you also become aware that when they laid out this course they certainly did not skimp on the greens which must be some of the largest on Long Island. The 1st green is over 50 yards deep and 30 yards wide, which can alter club selection for your approach shot by up to two clubs, depending on the pin placement.

After the fairly straightforward 2nd and 3rd holes, the 4th also tends to look fairly simple from the tee at 307 from the whites. If you don't hit the fairway though, you are unlikely to get down in regulation because of the very strategically placed bunkers down the left and trees along the right. Then, the 5th hole is the first par 3 and also the toughest of the short holes. Here, the back tees play to 247 and the whites to 177 yards, a monstrous difference, which totally changes the hole. From the back tee, if the pin is on the left of the green, you have a semi-blind tee shot to add to the difficulty. The 6th, 7th and 8th are not too testing, as long as you stay out of trouble but the 9th is another matter. This closing hole on the front nine has water all up the right and also guarding the slight dogleg right approach to the green. If you go left off the tee you risk going out of bounds. The strategic approach for this hole, which plays at 373 yards from the back and 343 from the white tees, is to play for the widest landing area about 190 yards from the whites and this leaves a shot of about 150, depending on pin placement, to the green. Sam Panasci is one who believes that this hole is one of the best all round demanding, yet rewarding, holes on the course and it is hard to disagree with him after playing it. This also is a hole, which will play very differently according to wind conditions, especially on the approach shot to the green.

The second half starts off with another very well designed hole. One of the course guides refers to it as "Beautiful, yet sometimes evil," and the hole lives up to this description. As you hit to the green, the large stone wall surrounding the water guarding the green, looks less and less attractive to the eye and you begin to wonder just where the ball might ricochet to if you stray off line! The green on this hole is a staggering 55 yards deep or virtually 3 clubs different from a front pin to a back pin placement! After the long par 5 11th, the next hole is the one that many believe to be the signature hole at Swan Lake. At 466 yards from the back tee and 431 from the whites, this is a demanding par 4 for even a low handicap golfer and fully deserves its No.1 handicap rating. Assuming you hit the fairway, the approach shot to the green requires great precision because the green is narrow and hourglass-shaped, over 40 yards deep and guarded on both sides by bunkers. The 13th is another short hole where the pin placement can alter the length considerably because this green is 50 yards deep. The 14th has won acclaim from many and has just been voted the best 14th hole on semi-private and public courses on Long Island's East End by the golfing readers of Dan's Papers. Although a relatively modest 373 from the whites it will feel a lot longer if you fail to place your tee shot to the left of the mixture of grassy mound and sand traps which guard the (theoretically) shortest route to this green, which is considered to be the hardest to read on the course. The 17th is a dogleg right, which just invites those who feel strong to cut the corner. Only try this if you can fly the ball at least 210 if you are playing from the whites and 250 if you play from the back tees, otherwise, play the percentages, play to the corner, open up the green and leave yourself a medium iron or fairway wood to the green. The final hole is a great finishing hole with bunkers to catch drives down the left and right but the real fun comes with your shot to the green, which gives you your final look at the water which encircles the back half of the green.

All in all, this is a golf course that was very much ahead of its time when it was first opened and still offers golfers of all levels of skill an intriguing, testing and enjoyable round of golf. The enormous greens offer a wide range of pin placements and, coupled with the changing winds, could mean a shift of three or four clubs on your approach shots from the same distance but on different days.

Obviously not the best clearer, I was finally, at the end of the night, relegated to a station appropriately called the sanitation hut. This was where other waiters brought the dirty dishes and silverware to be cleaned and stacked by one person. Me. I had no problem with this, quickly developed a system and was happy to just be working. There was only one problem. I was hungry.

I did not realize that catering workers do not get breaks. No one comes up to you and says, "Hey Jeff, why don't you take a five minute break." If you do not seize the opportunity to grab a couple of deviled eggs, run behind a tree and stuff them down your throat like a starving fugitive, you go hungry.

At this particular party, we were serving Texas barbecue and the plates that I had been clearing had wonderful, succulent-looking ribs on them that were calling my name. I tried to stave off temptation but remember, I hadn't eaten anything for hours. Finally, I grabbed one of those ribs – it couldn't have had more than two bites worth on it – peaked out of the shack to insure that the coast was clear, sat on a bus bucket and ate it. It was delicious.

At that moment, all was right with the world. I was one of those people whose path led to ATTENDING NICE PARTIES IN THE HAMPTONS.

Which Way To Lake George?

The last weekend in August a few college friends and I took our first, decidedly annual, camping trip. We ventured north to Lake Luzerne for a three night outing with enough gear to last us for three weeks in the wilderness, even though our campsite was only seven miles from the Village of Lake George. We didn't exactly rough it, opting for a trip to Dunkin Donuts rather than brewing our own coffee on an open fire in the morning, but we did embrace the camping spirit in other ways.

We set up camp on site 20 at the Lake Luzerne Campground on Fourth Lake in the Adirondacks, which we had reserved two weeks in advance. Four of us ended up pitching the tent (actually I pretty much pitched the tent since, and I don't mean to brag, I am a bit of an expert tent pitcher due to my many hikes on the Appalachian Trail) in complete darkness on Thursday night when we arrived, while Byrd and Rob, the two stragglers, rolled in a few hours later to find Scott, Vinny, Allison and I desperately trying to start a fire. It had slipped our minds to pick up some firewood, although we did have two bottles of wine and plenty of beer and snacks. Luckily, a generous fellow camper at a nearby site overheard us struggling and offered us a few logs to get us started. What he failed to tell us was that the logs were trick, fire-proof logs.

We just about emptied the entire forest of twigs for kindling and crumpled every scrap of paper we could scrounge out of our two cars...but alas no flames. Our savior from the darkness and chill (Allison left the lantern at Scott's house) came in a white plastic bottle. Yes, Rob and Byrd showed up late, but they did bring lighter fluid and Byrd packed a lantern for some added brightness. After the fire was finally ablaze, we all settled down in our fold up Coleman chairs with cup holders and joked well into the night.

I had a fairly pleasant night's sleep since I had a ridge rest to provide some padding between my sleeping bag and the hard ground. Apparently Vinny did as well; he told us in the morning how much he truly loved the giant bolder digging into his hip all night as Byrd and Allison closed in on him in a subconscious hunt for warmth. Despite a little stiffness and maybe a slight hangover, we were ready to fight the rapids on the Sagandaga River.

Now this particular group of friends, although hysterical and SO much fun, is not one to have an itinerary, or even the ability to make a simple decision for that matter, but we all finally agreed that tubing was the way to go. It just happened that only a few minutes away from our campsite Aro, a rafting and tubing company, was offering a trip only a half hour after we arrived to inquire about an excursion, so we all strapped on our yellow life preservers and piled onto the yellow school bus for the twenty minute journey to the Sagandaga.

Drew, our tubing guide, gave us a few simple instructions and in a matter of minutes we were floating down the river in our big, black, rubber inner tubes as he led in a kayak, challenging us to do tricks such as tube surf, which is basically standing on your tube. Most of us were able to get up on our hands and knees and a few of us managed to get one foot on the tube before spilling, but we didn't feel so inept after he informed us that the feat had only been successfully performed once by a fourteen-year-old, 90 pound boy who was a gymnast. The Sagandaga wasn't exactly the river wild, but the grade two and three rapids were enough to make us laugh, let out a few screams and give us a great arm workout from paddling backward. We had a blast.

After a quick trip to the batting cages in the Village of Lake George, we picked up some lunch and brought a cooler to Fourth Lake for some quiet fishing. We didn't catch anything, but we were entertained by the clown show that Rob put on. Used to spear fishing for striped bass under jetties in the Hamptons, he thought he'd get decked out in his gear, wet suit, weight belt, flippers, mask and snorkel, and see if he couldn't spear some fish in the lake. It was beyond ridiculous and we were in tears as we snapped pictures and Byrd yelled at scuba man...how was he expected to catch fish when Rob was snorkeling two feet from his line?! Since we didn't catch our dinner as the boys promised, we grilled some chicken on the hibachi and then kicked back before some serious smores making, the cliché but highly under rated camping tradition.

Saturday, we headed to Bolton Landing and a place called Up Yonda. Up Yonda has some lovely hiking trails and a butterfly garden. When out of the woods, we caught a panoramic view of Lake George atop a grassy hill and snapped some photos. We encouraged Vinny to tuck and roll down the hill, but he declined. The boys then headed to town, while Allison and I decided to rent a canoe at a nearby marina past the small, quaint village of Bolton Landing. We paddled out to a small island where we docked and had a refreshing swim. Lake George is one of the cleanest lakes in existence with visibility of 19 to 23 feet, due to the nature of its watershed and the surrounding mountains and forests, which help to prevent runoff pollution (some facts I learned on the sign on the hill at Up Yonda). We definitely witnessed this first hand during our swim. I felt as if I could fill up a bottle and drink this water!

We canoed along the shore for about two hours and our arms were thankful when the boys picked us up to go to the village for some shopping and an Italian dinner at Cate's. Al and I couldn't resist Ben and Jerry's, so we met the boys at Duffy's, a bar in Lake George, for some live classic rock music. Back at the campsite we only sat around the fire for a little while knowing we had an early morning of packing and, unbelievably, we were on the road, or at least on our way to Mobil for gas and coffee, at nine o'clock.

On our second annual camping trip we are planning to go white water rafting and horseback riding and hopefully catch some fish.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

MARIA SCHON AT EDGE MEDIA STUDIO

There's a new art gallery in town, and while this isn't particularly startling news since a lot of galleries just opened this summer, the current artist at Sag Harbor's Edge Media Studio also seems new in town. And well she should. We haven't seen work by Maria Schon in several years, but we remember it well. Although there's some structural resemblance to her furniture forms from the past, Ms. Schon has provided us with a different kind of technology, subject matter and theme this time around that is refreshing as well as striking.

Ms. Schon's series, "Tropical Elements," is a collection of limited edition digital prints which were processed from her own drawings. What is most striking, initially, are the pale pinks/purples which exert a subtle presence in the black and white landscape. We learn, in fact, that the prints are actually black and white.

What is also provocative are the unique forms: plants, sea, and mountains that define a tropical climate. There's something archetypal about the shapes, however, a quality that goes beyond their primitive and indigenous aspects. Such configurations could be abstract or representational, existing in exotic South America as well as on some alien planet.

Work by Maria Schon

Ms. Schon's use of depth is also eye-catching with background/foreground composition. It's intriguing to this critic, particularly, how both artists and filmmakers imbue flat surfaces with three - dimensionality. In cinema, movement can account for some of this depth: characters or objects moving diagonally or a camera moving toward an object.

A zoom- in by the camera lens can also evoke depth; it is this device which Ms. Schon's compositions most resemble - when the background and foreground meet midpoint. Depth is not only accomplished but also mysterious.

Which gets us to Ms. Schon's final striking element: the theme. Are these shapes the beginning of the universe or the end? Are they heaven or a metaphor for hell? Yes, they are "imaginary" landscapes, but does that notion give us a false reading? Perhaps these luscious, perfect settings are not what they seem.

"Tropical Elements" will be on view at Sag Harbor's Edge Media Studio (197 Madison Street) until September 22.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Nick Webber

It's a long way from California at night, the site of this week's cover by Nick Webber. Instead, the artist and yours truly are sitting happily in broad daylight among the trees and flowers at Amagansett's Farmer's Market. Mr. Webber looks at home here, as we can also imagine his fitting right into California's casual environs as well.

Which makes sense because Mr. Webber went to college in California, coming back to work in Wainscott for awhile and then moving to New York. His real beginnings, however, started in New Jersey where he says he was influenced by Bruce Springsteen, particularly the characters from songs like "The Ghost of Tom Joad."

We're interested in what makes Springsteen so influential. "Bruce reveals his characters' hopes, their aspirations, without telling the story of their lives," Mr. Webber explains.

We can understand what attracts Mr. Webber to the musician when we see his paintings. One features a girl walking alone down the street at night, coming toward us as if we were on the street as well. We sense she has a story to tell, but we can't quite grasp it. There's also a sense of loneliness in her face. Mr. Webber agrees. "Night is unavailable to men and women. Men want to say hello, but can't connect to the woman."

There's another painting where two men are strolling down the street, but their backs are to us. They, too, seem lonely although we can't see their faces. Mr. Webber calls them an example of "Chelsea Boys."

Mr. Webber's ability to capture the essence of a person's character has led to his portrait work, including people as varied as an elevator man or affluent family members. Yet the family pieces are not your normal, formal portraits where everyone is grouped together and looking straight ahead. According to Mr. Webber, "I try and capture the family's interaction, what role each person plays."

The concept of family has special meaning for Mr. Webber. (He has been coming to stay with his grandmother in Amagansett periodically since the 1970s.) For example, he's apparently proud of his siblings who are following interesting, diverse pursuits: a sister belongs to an organization, Open Space, and takes people on hikes, another sister is a dance teacher, and a brother is a comedy writer.

The most telling aspect of his relationship to his own family, however, is Mr. Webber's self portrait. "I'm standing outside my parents' house at night, " he explains. "I don't feel like a totally independent person in that painting."

Now how many people would admit that? Nick Webber is not afraid of being honest.

Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Webber will be exhibiting his work at New York's Get Real Gallery in early January.

Springing From Stone

Contemporary African artist, Dominic Benhura, brought a strong selection of his stone sculptures to the Hampton Classic, shown by Native Accents Gallery. Tall and serious at first, Dominic's face broke into a broad smile while discussing his work. The work is his life, much more than an avocation; the design and its execution in stone are an overwhelming and irresistible part of the artist's existence.

Dominic Benhura at the Hampton Classic with Native Accents

Dominic's pieces have been exhibited widely throughout the U.S. and internationally for the last fifteen years in over forty solo and group shows. He has both judged the work of other artists and received prestigious awards for his own.

Springing from stone are the figurative and highly gestural works, the delightful children, buoyant in their space, and ready to jump off the pedestals on which they are perched. The materials used in the work include serpentine, verdite, springstone, and marble, for an overall texturally complex and colorful three-dimensional rendering.

After spending five years at the Chapungu Sculpture Park, Dominic's close association working with other artists led him to a vision of having a place where he could assist and teach other sculptors. This became a reality in 1995 with the opening of the Dominic Studio, as his atelier is known, encompassing the work of fifteen sculptors and the involvement of two of Dominic's brothers.

Thi Master Shona Sculptor is from a highly regarded, world-renowned force who influenced Picasso and other Moderns. The stone lives in the hands of Dominic Benhura. Native Accents will continue to bring this fascinating art to the Hamptons in their new gallery.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

When Joan Nathan, a respected award-winning cookbook author visited the Hamptons a little over a month ago, she brought along her latest "newborn," her tome on The Foods of Israel Today, published by Knopf (Joan has written several best-selling cookbooks). As guest speaker at the Jewish Center of the Hamptons in East Hampton the upbeat Ms. Nathan regaled her audience with engaging tales of an extraordinary culinary journey, a journey that played out in the carefully researched recipes she culled from both home and professional cooks in the multi-ethnic communities she visited. While some of the recipes are "as old as the land; others are quite modern," she writes.

The cultural diversity of the recipes in the book are illustrated by the following: Czech stuffed chicken from Prague, vegetable kubbeh with mint and potatoes from a Syrian Alawite village, St. Peter's fish from the Sea of Galilee, Iraqi pita bread baked in a wood fired clay oven from Jerusalem's Bukharan Quarter, paper-thin lavash from a Druse village and Turkish coconut cake from a tiny restaurant in Haifa. Bukharan chelou, a chicken recipe with rice, carrots and pine nuts is particularly well suited for Rosh Hashanah, the High-Holiday Jews the world over will celebrate this coming week.

Following Ms. Nathan's enthusiastic discussion, guests were treated to a delicious bounty of desserts from the book prepared by members of the Jewish center. The colorful variety included a memorable lemony Polish Israeli cheesecake.

AMIRA'S TRIPLE CITRUS MARMALADE

Amira Ruben is a cheese maker and bread baker in Rosh Pina, Israel. She prepares this brightly colored chunky jam from citrus fruits and serves it slathered on her homemade bread with butter.
Yield: About 6 cups

6 cups unpeeled, thinly sliced mixed citrus fruits like orange and grapefruit, seeds removed
About 3 cups sugar

1. Put the fruit in a saucepan and add the sugar. Bring to a boil, then simmer slowly, uncovered for about 45 minutes until the marmalade thickens, stirring constantly so that you do not caramelize the sugar.

2. Pour into jars, cover and refrigerate.

BUKHARAN CHELOU

This chicken recipe with carrots, rice and pine nuts is particularly well suited for the coming Rosh Hashanah holiday. Ms. Nathan suggests this dish can be made with leftover chicken.
Yield: 6-8 servings

4-pound chicken, cut into 8 pieces
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 large onions, sliced in rounds
1/4 cup vegetable oil 8 carrots, peeled and julienned
1/2 teaspoon turmeric
3 cups basmati rice
1/4 cup toasted pine nuts
1/4 cup raisins

1. Season the chicken with salt and pepper. Place in a flameproof casserole and cover with water. Bring to a boil and simmer for about 25-30 minutes or until the chicken is cooked.

2. Meanwhile, saute the onions in the oil in a nonstick frying pan until they are translucent. Add the carrots, salt and pepper to taste, and turmeric, stirring well.

3. Remove the chicken from the pot with a slotted spoon and pour the cooking liquid into the pan with the vegetables. Set the chicken aside then place in a warm (180-degree) oven while the rice cooks.

4. Wash the rice with cold water 3 times, draining after each wash. Scatter the rice on top of the carrots. If necessary, add more water so that the rice is covered by 1 inch. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer slowly, about 20 minutes, or until the rice is cooked.

5. Remove the chicken from the oven and cut the meat from the bones in bit-size pieces. Spoon the rice and vegetables onto a serving platter and scatter the pieces of chicken on top. Sprinkle with the toasted pine nuts and the raisins.

ZELDA SCHNUR'S POLISH ISRAELI CHEESECAKE

The late Zelda Schnur, who was from Zamosc, Poland, was the best friend of Joan Nathan's mother-in-law. Whenever the Nathan's eat this delectable dessert it brings Mr. Nathan back to his mother's kitchen. Yield: 10-12 servings

For the crust
1 1/2 cups cookie crumbs, from vanilla wafers or graham crackers (about 4 ounces of cookies)
1/2 cup sugar
8 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon

For the cake
20 ounces cream cheese
3 large eggs, separated
1 1/4 cups sugar
Juice and zest of 1 large lemon
2 teaspoons vanilla
1/2 cup unbleached all-purpose flour
1 cup sour cream

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

1. To prepare the crust, put the crumbs, sugar, melted butter, and cinnamon in the bowl of a food processor with a steel blade. Process until fine crumbs are formed.

2. Press the crumb mixture into the bottom and 2 1/2 inches up the sides of a 10-inch springform pan. Set aside.

3. To make the filling, put the cream cheese, egg yolks, 3/4 cup of the sugar, lemon juice and zest, and 1 teaspoon of the vanilla in the bowl of a food processor and puree. Then add the flour and pulse until well blended.

3. In the bowl of an electric mixer, beat the egg whites with 1/4 cup more of the sugar, until stiff peaks are formed. Carefully fold the cream cheese mixture into the egg whites until just incorporated. Pour into the crumb-lined pan. Bake on the lower rack of the oven for 60 minutes.

4. Meanwhile, mix the sour cream, the remaining 1/4 cup sugar, and the remaining 1 teaspoon of vanilla in a small bowl until well blended.

5. Remove the cake from the oven and allow it to sit for 10 minutes. Pour the sour cream mixture over the cake. Return to the oven and bake for 10 minutes more or until a toothpick comes out clean. Cool slightly and remove from the pan. Chill for at least 2-3 hours before serving.

Home Improvment

Now that the hectic days of summer have come to an end, you may be considering tackling some home improvements. Here are two simple projects that you can successfully complete in a weekend.

Stenciling:

Stenciling is a folk art form of wall painting that originated as an alternative to buying expensive wallpaper and rugs. Now the technique has been revived along with the other elements of country-style decorating and design. One advantage of stenciling today is that the modern plastic stencils don't tear, fray or fall apart like the paper versions did in the old days. They're also sold at craft stores in pre-cut, ready-to-paint forms, and available in any number of patterns. You can also buy sheets of pre-drawn stencils and cut them out with a hobby knife. And if you want to be more creative, get plain clear plastic material, draw your own pattern and cut it out yourself.

Create walls and/or floor border, highlight certain parts of a room, cover entire wall sections or decorate furniture and fabrics.

Stencil Paints:

Crafts stores stock small cans or bottles of paint specifically for stenciling projects, but you could use any latex or alkyd-based paints. If you're using more than one color on a stencil, it's better to work with fast-drying paints or to add a product known as "Japan Dryer" to the paint to encourage quick drying.

Stencil paints work best over an existing flat paint surface, but they'll also work over wood and non-vinyl wallpapers.

Stencil Brushes:

You can stencil with regular paint brushes, but there are special circular brushes available for stenciling that have densely packed bristles. They're better than regular brushes for filling in the tight areas of a pattern and controlling paint along curved edges and they are generally a bit neater. They also come in several different sizes so you don't have to labor with a tiny brush on a larger area.

Preparing to Stencil:

Before getting into the paint, do a dry run of your stencil layout. If you want a repeating design, use a straightedge to line it up, measure out the placement of each design and mark them lightly with a pencil for reference. For first time stencilers or those who want to see how the stencil will look, practice by painting the stencil on a scrap of wallboard, paper or newspaper. That will give you a sense of the paint's texture and how to manage the brushes. Once you're ready for the real thing, clean the stencil off and tape it securely in position so it doesn't move while you're painting. Drafting tape works best since it won't pull off the existing finish, but painters' masking tape is also appropriate for this kind of job because it has a weaker adhesive. Whatever tape you use, first apply and remove it on the surface in a hidden area.

Stenciling Techniques:

When using a stenciling brush, the best painting technique is to lightly tap the end of the brush on the surface, covering small sections at a time. Don't get too much paint on the brush because paint could run down behind the stencil. If you're using more than one color, one option is to use separate brushes to apply each color. On large projects, it's often easier to apply one color first, moving the stencil as needed. Then go back to the beginning and apply the second color, and so on, until all the colors are done. That way, the first colors will dry before the next ones are applied. By the way, wet paint can smear when you pull the stencil off, so make sure the paint has dried. Stenciling paints dry quickly and shouldn't pose this problem.

Sponge Stenciling:

One variation on the stenciling technique is to cut a pattern into a sponge and use that to stamp the pattern onto a surface. A regular, synthetic cleaning sponge works best for this application because of its relatively flat surface. For the patterns, you can use anything, but your best bet is to find cookie cutters in shapes you like. The hard part of the job is cutting a precise pattern into the sponge. With a cookie cutter it's a lot easier. Just press the cutter into the sponge and trim along the outside edges with a utility knife. Make sure to use a sharp blade, handling it carefully because the blade can easily slip. Once you've cut the sponge, you're ready to paint. Before sponging the wall, practice on a scrap of cardboard or drywall to get just the right feel for the stencil and how much paint to use. To make sure you get the look you want, mark off the likeliest spots for stenciling before painting, then make any placement corrections. When you're ready to paint, pour a little paint into a shallow, flat container like a pie tin or a paint lid, and use that to load up the sponge. Dunking directly into the paint bucket may overload the sponge. Press the sponge onto the wall at your marks, periodically stepping back to check your work.

Laminate Flooring:

Rolling Underlayment

First, measure the width of the room to figure how the last row of planks will end up. Do this before installing a vapor barrier and underlayment to avoid tearing them. Make sure the last row of planks won't be too narrow (generally planks under 2" are too small). Otherwise, plan on rip sawing the first row to get the last row width to look right. Many manufacturers recommend that a vapor barrier be put down first to protect the flooring from moisture. We used an 8 mil polyethylene plastic and overlapped sections by about 8". Roll out the foam underlayment so it fits tight against the walls. Pull out any wrinkles and trim excess foam along edges and around ducts. Tape the seams together with duct tape or as directed.

Cutting and Gluing Pieces:

Some manufacturers provide an installation kit that may include items such as spacers, a pull bar to fit planking together, and special glue. These kits are designed to work with the manufacturer's product and can make the job easier and better. Test-fit the first few rows of planks before gluing. Add spacers between the planks and walls to allow for expansion/contraction. It may be necessary to trim the door casing and plane off the bottom of the door to clear the new flooring. Set a jamb saw on a piece of scrap flooring to guide how much casing to cut off. Butt a piece of flooring along the door bottom and trace with a pencil to mark how much needs to come off. Add an extra 1/8" for good clearance. Cutting the flooring planks is just like sawing laminate countertops; they may chip if not done correctly. Follow the manufacturer's directions according to the type of tool you're using. Generally, cut the plank face side up with a hand saw or from the backside if using a power saw. Apply glue to the groove joint of each plank (skip the first row groove; it's butted next to the wall) and tap them together with a wood block. Then snug the ends together. Wipe off any excess glue with a damp rag. The last row fits tight to its neighbor with the help of the pull bar. Stay off the floor as long as specified. Our instructions stated that due to the special water-based glue, some joints may swell and become uneven for up to a week, but will eventually settle back into place.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

What To Do About Hair Loss?

By Mary J. Shomon

Hair can be considered a barometer of health. Hair cells are some of the fastest growing in the body. When the body is under stress, or is coping with certain diseases or hormonal imbalances, the hair cells can shut down in order to send energy elsewhere. The types of situations that can cause hair loss include hormonal changes, poor diet and nutritional deficiencies, a variety of medications, surgery, and many medical conditions. In particular, auto-immune diseases are a common cause of hair loss, especially thyroid disease.

Thyroid disease is estimated to affect as many as ten million people. Plus another ten million have thyroid conditions that have not yet been diagnosed. And for many people, changes in hair may be the first, or only, symptom of a thyroid condition. Some people actually say this is the worst symptom of their thyroid problem – this thinning hair, tufts of hair falling out in the shower or sink, often accompanied by changes in the hair's texture, making it dry, coarse, or easily tangled.

If you suspect your hair loss may be due to a thyroid problem, here are some pointers to help:

1. Have Your Thyroid Evaluated And Treated: See your physician for thyroid testing and proper treatment. In some cases, proper thyroid treatment will slow or stop hair problems, and slowly allow hair to return to normal.

2. Have Your Hair Loss Evaluated: If you are properly treated for your thyroid condition and are still losing hair, before assuming it's still your thyroid, always have any hair loss evaluated by a dermatologist or hair loss expert to rule out any other causes, such as infection. For a hair loss specialist, visit the American Hair Loss Council to find a doctor who focuses on hair loss.

3. Be Patient: If you're experiencing hair loss and are just starting treatment for a hypothyroid or hyperthyroid condition, it's likely that the loss will slow down, and eventually stop, once hormone levels are stabilized and in the normal range. This may take a few months, however, so patience is key.

4. Understand The Types Of Hair Loss: There are three common types of hair loss. General shedding of hair is typically hair lost throughout the head. You'll often notice more hair in drains and in the shower, in hairbrushes, and when you brush your hair, but there are no specific patches of loss or even baldness. Typically, with thyroid disease, this is the most common form of hair loss. This can occasionally continue for some people after treatment, and particularly when taking thyroid hormone replacement drugs.

5. Make Sure It's Not Your Thyroid Drug: First, if you are hypothyroid and taking levothyroxine (i.e., Synthroid or Levoxyl) as your thyroid hormone replacement, and still losing hair, you may need to take action. Prolonged or excessive hair loss IS a side effect of these drugs for some people. You can ask your doctor about other brands, or even natural desiccated Armour thyroid, to see if that slows hair loss.

6. Make Sure You're Not Undertreated: Hair loss can also result from being UNDERtreated...not getting enough thyroid hormone replacement. Find out where you are in terms of the "TSH" level, a measure of the amount of thyroid hormone circulating in your system, and if you're toward the hypothyroid range, you might ask the doctor whether a slight dosage increase might help your hair loss.

7. Find Out If You Need A Second Drug: Some people have less hair loss when they are taking other drugs besides levothyroxine, which contains only one form of thyroid hormone. Options include Thyrolar, a synthetic drug, or Armour, a natural drug that contains a combination of several thyroid hormones.

8. Consider An Alternative Treatment: Boston area endocrinologist Dr. Kenneth Blanchard has suggested evening primrose oil for thyroid patients with hair loss and says that "the problem is their excessive conversion of testosterone to dihydrotestosterone at the level of the hair follicle. Evening primrose oil is an inhibitor of that conversion. So almost anybody with hair loss probably will benefit from evening primrose oil."

9. Look At Other Alternatives: In a study, Dr Hugh Rushton, a professor at Portsmouth University, also found that 90 percent of women with thinning hair were deficient in iron and the amino acid lysine. Lysine is the most difficult amino acid to get enough of via diet. Lysine helps transport iron, which is the most important element in the body and essential for many metabolic processes. When lysine and iron levels are low, the body probably switches some hair follicles off to increase levels elsewhere. Meat, fish and eggs are the only food sources of lysine. There are also supplements that contain lysine.

Some other supplements and hormones that may help with hair loss include: Arginine, Cysteine, Progesterone, Saw Palmetto, Vitamin B6, and Zinc.

10. Consult A Doctor For A Prescription Treatment: You can also consult with a dermatologist to work with you on drug treatments, including scalp injections, drugs like Rogaine (minoxidil) and Propecia, and other treatments that can help non-thyroid related hair loss.

A second type of hair loss is more commonly associated with fungal infection or auto-immune alopecia, and involves circular patches of hair loss, and in some cases, complete loss of hair in these small patches. These sorts of hair loss problems need to be evaluated by a dermatologist. They are more common with thyroid

The third type of hair loss is male pattern hair loss– men are most susceptible, but women can get it too. Male pattern hair loss is concentrated on the temples and top of the head. It's caused when an enzyme starts to convert the hormone testosterone on the scalp to its less useful version, dihydrotestosterone. This makes hair follicles shrink and then they disappear. This conversion of testosterone to dihydrotestosterone seems to be sped up in some patients with treated hyperthyroidism or hypothyroidism, and may be the cause of hair loss that continues for thyroid patients, despite what is considered sufficient thyroid treatment. Finally, remember that one of the most telling forms of hair loss is loss of hair in the outer edges of the eyebrows – frequently a sign of thyroid disease.

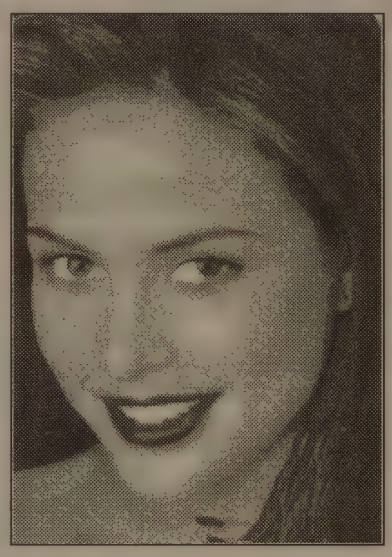
HEALTH & BEAUTY

A Flawless Smile

The sweet scent of aromatherapy candles wafts through the air. Classical music soothes the spirits. A tasty beverage of your choice awaits. Relax as the chair reclines and massages away the troubles of your day. Pamper your hands with warm mitts and lotion as you watch your favorite movie. Sounds like a day at the spa, right? A trip to the dentist has never been better. Just imagine the thrill you'll feel as you leave the office completely relaxed and beaming to show off your fabulous smile.



You may have mistaken her for Diane Sawyer's new co-host, on ABC's Good Morning, America! Dr. Debra Glassman's personal style amazes television audiences as well as her patients. Many men have remarked, "If my childhood dentist was as good looking as you are, I'd have taken better care of my teeth." As one of the only female cosmetic dentists in New York, Debra Glassman brings a new perspective to the field. Her gentle touch, calm demeanor and individuality make her my dentist of choice. After all, if she's good enough for Diane Sawyer, she's good enough for me!

What is the first thing you notice about someone? If you are like most people, it's their smile. Does yours radiate confidence and sincerity? Would you like it to? I spoke with Dr. Debra Glassman at length about cosmetic dentistry and I was amazed with the miraculous transformations that many of her patients have undergone. People fly in from around the world for a "Glassman Smile." Whether you need a laser whitening or a full mouth restoration, Dr. Glassman will create the smile you have been dreaming of all your life. Laser whitening technology evolves constantly, and Dr. Glassman embraces improvements in her field. Dr. Debra is more than a dentist; she is a perfectionist. Her work is absolutely flawless, done with the utmost care. It is rare to find a person who is completely happy with and fulfilled by his or her career. Her voice is filled with enthusiasm when she talks about teeth.

I arrived early for my appointment and took a few minutes to look at the "smile of the month" hanging on the Glassman wall of fame. I was amazed to find that many of my favorite models and television personalities trust their smiles to the care of Dr. Glassman. I turned around to see a handsome man in his early forties with an enchanting grin. He left the office aglow with confidence, "and with my phone number." Dr. Debra Glassman greeted me with warmth, encouragement, a choice of CD's and, of course, a dazzling smile of her own. The laser whitening procedure took a little bit longer than an hour, and it felt like a routine cleaning. My teeth looked incredible! I could not stop smiling! It was then that Dr. Glassman informed me that I could only eat and drink white or clear items for the remainder of the day and the day after. I must say, that was the only downside to the

POLICE BLOTTER

Last Friday night in Southampton Village, village police said a man by the name of Robert Smalls touched a woman without her permission. Smalls was subsequently arrested and charged with forcibly touching.

Seventeen-year old Nicholas P. Haines was arrested last Sunday and charged with criminal mischief in the second degree and criminal possession of a forged instrument in the second degree. Just before 7 a.m. Haines broke the mirrors off a 2000 Cadillac which was parked on Trout Lane in Sagaponack. When police came to investigate reports of the vandalism, they found Haines's cell phone ringing and answered it. It was Mr. Haines calling to tell police he was at the 7-Eleven store in Southampton. When police arrived at the 7-Eleven and asked him for identification, Haines produced three different drivers' licenses, all with altered birth dates.

Southampton Town Police were called to a Dune Road nightclub in Hampton Bays when a man was reported as throwing pebbles at people in the parking lot. He was arrested but was later released on an appearance ticket.

* * *

Last Thursday a man was arrested on Peconic Avenue in North Sea after being subdued by his tenant and neighbor. 58-year old Kenneth Carauana had asked his tenant, Francis Larkin age 36, for a loan. After Larkin refused to give him any money, his landlord left, only to return wielding a sawed off, double-barreled shotgun. Larkin, fearing for his life, hid in the bathroom. Carauana shot through the door striking Larkin in the arm. Larkin then ran from the house to ask a neighbor to call police. Carauana then stole his truck and came at him with it. Larkin jumped into the bed of the truck and pulled Carauana by the hair through the window. When Carauana finally stopped the vehicle, Larkin and his neighbor, Craig Kruzel, were able to wrestle Carauana to the ground and hold him until town police arrived.

Kenneth Carauana was arrested and charged with burglary in the first, assault in the first, criminal possession of a weapon in the second and third, criminal use of a weapon in the first, grand larceny in the third, reckless endangerment in the first, and menacing in the second degree. If Mr. Carauana keeps it up, he'll be signed to a popular hip-hop record label in no time.

* * *

At around 1 p.m. on August 28, Tori Matthews, 18, was stabbed at the Best Eastern Motel in East Quogue. Her 33-year old stabber, Barbara Edmond, was arrested at the scene and charged with assault in the second degree and criminal possession of a weapon.

* * *

Another East End motel was the sight of some criminal activity last week. According to police, a burglar entered through the unlocked window of room 311 at the Budget Host Inn in Riverside. The perpetrator made off with some aromatic booty including a bottle of Armani cologne, a knapsack, and some clothing. Police have taken no one into custody for the thefts, but are trying to smell out a well-dressed and well-traveled suspect.

Another touching incident in Southampton last Tuesday caused a Southampton woman to call the town police. At about 7:20 p.m. she was walking on Cold Spring Pond Road and saw a man, who appeared to be in his late 20s with dark hair, standing naked on the side of the road masturbating. The woman told police that, before the incident, she had seen the man drive past her several times in a red Jeep.

Dan's LETTERS

SECOND LOOK AT FIRST LOOK
Dear Dan,

I'd like to offer my sincerest apologies for the recent cancellation of a special screening of Bread & Tulips in East Hampton, sponsored by our company, First Look Pictures, and the Hamptons International Film Festival.

Due to the incompetence of an independent mailing house, the invitations were mailed late. When we discovered this, we realized that most of the invitees would not receive their invitations until after the scheduled screening date of Saturday, July 15. As a result, we were forced to cancel the screening.

First Look Pictures would like to apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused you. We'd also like to thank the Hamptons International Film Festival for their patience and understanding. The 9th Annual Hamptons International Film Festival runs October 17-21, 2001 and we hope you will participate as in years past.

Again, we are truly sorry the screening had to be cancelled, as we know you would have enjoyed Bread & Tulips.

ANIMAL FREE CIRCUS SOLUTION
Dear Dan,

It is a shame that the faith of helpless creatures such as animals, birds and other gifts of God, are in the hands of such narrow-minded people. Suppose you were a creature (animal) who roamed freely and were captured and placed in a confined area 20 feet by 20 feet (like a zoo) or in a circus chained in a small 8 x 10 area. Do you think you would be sad – no freedom, no movement? Don't you think they have feelings like you? Of course, they do. But they cannot communicate or speak; they do not have lobbyists!

Even the Ringling Brothers Circus realizes this problem. They have a "second and new unit" which is "animal free" like the famous Cirque du Soleil. They are a French Canadian Troupe and have the most popular and magnificent show in the world. As a matter of fact, they have three shows going on simultaneously in Las Vegas and they also tour the world. They recently played Liberty State Park in New Jersey under the world's largest tent.

It would be wonderful if you would seek out Cirque du Soleil or perhaps the Big Apple Circus. Then you would make everyone happy and you would increase your business, stop the torture and stop the picket lines and feel good inside.

ARTISTS AND WRITERS BLOCK
Dear Dan,

I don't usually write to papers, however, we've enjoyed the game for years now and notice that the bleacher seats are set where not a lot of people go. Even if they want to, the outfield is blocked to walking around it. In addition, the giveaways by details created a bottleneck sitting where they did. I hope you make sure this does not happen again as it is for a good cause. Thank you

ITS ALL IN THE DETAILS
Dear Dan,

Thank you for the beautiful cover on the August 24 edition of Dan's Papers. It is pure joy. However, your fact checkers missed a few big ones in the same issue:

In the "Famous" article: Arthur Miller was Marilyn Monroe's third, not second, husband. Her first, at age 16, was a man named James Dougherty. Husband No. 2 was DiMaggio and Miller her third and last —Andy Warhol died in 1987, not 1977, as suggested on page 32. Therefore he died 27 years after getting the house in Montauk not 17 years after.

In the review of the revival of Hair: On page 44 the Kent State massacre and the blowing up of the townhouse are placed in the 60s. Kent State happened on May 5, 1970 and the explosion also happened that year. Neither event is linked to Hair.

CHEERS FROM SHIRLEY
Dear Dan,

I just had to write to tell you how much my husband and I enjoy reading your paper. We live on Long Island (Shirley), having moved east from Brooklyn some 10 years ago. We have been going out to Montauk almost every year for the past 20 years. We love everything about it, and are always amazed how at home we feel every time we drive right into Main Street. We first started going out there by ourselves, then when our son was born, we took him too.

I remember having to take all the sand toys on the train every year! (We lived in the city; we didn't need a car). Now, we look forward to coming and going on Montauk Highway (the bumpy one) as we call it. In fact we were just there this past Saturday (sans our son – he opted for Splish/Splash with his friends). My husband and I walked and ate and bought. And we just felt so good there. It felt like home and it felt like we were with friends who never go away. We hope to live there permanently one day (when my husband doesn't have to commute to the city via L.I.R.R.) And reading your paper makes us feel right there.

procedure. She also supplied me with custom whitening trays to use whenever I feel my smile needs a little lift. I feel confident and glamorous, I smile at everyone I see!

Not everyone is a candidate for laser whitening. Veneers are often a better option, especially if you are considering collagen injections. Sounds crazy, right? Applying veneers to straighten and even out your teeth will provide support for your lips, making them appear much fuller. Many of Dr. Glassman's patients choose to do a "smile lift" in conjunction with a face-lift.

Dr. Debra Glassman's interests extend beyond perfecting smiles. In addition to being the proud mother of three delightful and beautiful children, Dr. Glassman won the Liberty Angel Award for her involvement in raising funds for the pediatric AIDS dental clinic at the Jersey City Medical Center. The center cares for over 140 children living with AIDS in the State of New Jersey. If you don't already know Dr. Debra Glassman, you should. She really knows how to put a smile on your face!
